Famed Clown and Advance Man Succumb; Three Young Elephants Also Are Dead.

Tragedy struck the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey circus before show time yesterday with the death of a veteran clown, an advance man, and three of the show's 47 elephants.

The clown was Milt Taylor, 47, of El Monte, Cal., a suburb of Los Angeles. The advance man was Ernest Lindemood, a billposter, who had just closed his season in Florida.

The elephants were "Lizzie," 35 years old and a favorite with the circus folks; "Alice," who was only 25, and "Piqua," one of the show's two African pigmy elephants. All the beasts were young, circus men said, as elephants usually attain at least the age of 80.

Two other elephants—"Blanche" and "Tillie" were ill on the Highland avenue lot, but were reported last night as getting along satisfactorily.

Frank Braden, publicity man for the circus, said that "Lizzie" and "Alice" dropped dead in the menagerie in the morning, apparently the victims of poison. Last night, "Piqua" died.

"Eight years ago, 11 elephants were taken sick on the lot at Charlotte, N. C.," said Braden. "We pulled them through. We learned that a large chemical plant had been located near the lot, and that through the years seepage of chemicals had poisoned the ground where the animals grazed."

$505,490 Reported as Workers Agree To Follow Through.

With $505,490 reported as the unfinished status of the 1941 Community Fund appeal at yesterday's enthusiastic gathering of campaign volunteers, the drive passed last year's final figure and all campaign units agreed to follow through on incomplete assignments with prospects bright for reaching the $575,000 goal.

"As long as there's work to be done, as long as a pledge-card remains outstanding, as long as a potential giver is not in the fold, we're going to stick to this job," declared General Chairman R. H. Rich, and the several hundred leaders and workers present responded with a rising and tumultuous affirmative vote.

Option Taken In Grove Park For Almshouse

Attorney Voices Only Objection to New Site.

The Fulton County Board of Commissioners yesterday took a 30-day option on the 49-acre Malsby property and a corner adjoining it owned by other parties as a possible site for the county almshouse. If the option is taken up, the county will pay $16,000 for the whole tract.

The board ordered that the option be acquired by the legal department and that the option be met if the county engineer, purchasing department and superintendent of buildings are able to obtain specifications at a reasonable cost and if assurance is obtained that construction materials can be obtained without delay.

$71,000 Authorized. The county auditor was authorized to set up $71,000 residue from current revenue to begin erection of the buildings and was authorized to include further sums for completion of the project in its 1942 tentative budget.

Dr. C. W. Childs, representing a group of Grove Park residents and the West Side Development Company, which has an option on the Malsby property, said: "We are the only community which wants the almshouse. It has been a hot potato for many years. We welcome this 'hot potato' and pledge that in the future there will be no effort to have it removed from the new site."

Accepted Promptly. Dr. Childs turned over his company's option to the county for $1.

The commissioners had apparently agreed on resolutions approving the removal of the almshouse to the West Side before their meeting. Anyway, it was unanimously accepted as soon as Chairman Troy Chastain introduced it.

Commissioner Charlie Brown said that, at its last meeting, the commissioners had promised to make a definite decision on the problem yesterday, and that he, as chairman of the alms committee, had drawn up the resolutions in accordance with the views of the other members.

Although it is not mentioned in the resolutions adopted by the board, Chastain said after the

Plane Claimed Bearing Orders To Free French

Seizure Reported Near Reputed Center of English Activity.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. VICHY, Unoccupied France, Nov. 5.—The discovery and capture of an untested number of Free French parachutists in western unoccupied France and the capture of a grounded British plane loaded with de Gaulle propaganda in the same vicinity were disclosed today.

(The dispatch gave no indication as to when the parachutists were rounded up.) The plane, carrying instructions for de Gaulle agents, was captured near Perigueux two days ago when it was forced down by bad weather. The entire British crew was reported held.

The parachute troops reported landing in the vicinity of Perigueux—all of whom are understood to have been captured by the French—were said to have been French followers of General Charles de Gaulle.

Reports here said they were mostly natives of the region who were sent to hide themselves until opportunities to commit sabotage occurred.

(This dispatch is the first mention from Vichy of parachute troops having been found in France.) Perigueux is one of the largest centers of unoccupied France that is near Bordeaux in the occupied zone.

It was at Bordeaux that Jacques Doriot's semi-Fascist party boasted of attacking a synagogue which was described as headquarters of a British movement in France.

Rifle Shot Kills Fairbairn Woman

Mrs. H. E. Mayo, 58, was killed as she lay ill in bed at her home near Fairburn yesterday when a .22-caliber rifle which had been carried into the house by her grandson, Douglas Sutton, 8, was discharged, Fulton county police reported.

The bullet struck Mrs. Mayo in the head, and she died a few minutes later. Police said the grandfather, H. E. Mayo, and G. L. Cannon, were using the weapon for target practice when Mayo told the lad to take the rifle into the house.

Coroner Donehoo said last night it was undecided if an inquest would be held.

NOT A LEG SHOW—No, it wasn't a leg show; it had something to do with chrysanthemums. The photograph shows Everett Strupper's honorable mention exhibit in the President's Husbands' Class at the Chrysanthemum Show yesterday at Piedmont Driving Club, as Mrs. Carter Davis, of the Iris Garden Club, gives it the once over.

Two Negroes 'He-Men' Sweep Top Honors Get Chair, Life With Chrysanthemum Displays For Murder

Action Follows Plea for Suffer Sentences in Such Cases

A Negro was given a mandatory death penalty and another Negro received a life sentence yesterday in criminal divisions of Fulton county superior court, on murder charges involving the slaying of other Negroes.

The sentences followed recent agitation, including grand jury presentments urging "stiffer" sentences for Negro murderers and commending a column by Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution, in which he wrote that one reason for Atlanta's high crime rate was the meting out of light sentences with the attitude of "it's just another Negro murder."

One Negro was Eddie Green, charged with the murder of another Negro, Curtis Barber, last June 1. Green, who said that he and Barber had quarreled over Green's wife, shot Barber to death. At the time, Barber was lying on a studio couch at his home on Collier street. Judge A. L. Etheridge, who heard the case, will set a date for Green's electrocution Friday.

The prosecutor was Judge W. B. Parham, assistant solicitor general.

In the other case, before Judge Walter Hendrix, William Baker was charged with stabbing Clarence Clark to death. His consent plea carried a sentence of life imprisonment. The jury later brought in a verdict of guilty.

BY YOLANDE GWIN.

And were the wives mad! They acted pretty smug about the whole thing, though, since it was their idea to stage the chrysanthemum show yesterday at Piedmont Driving Club.

But they were green with envy! Except Mrs. Laurie Webster, and she was thrilled! She staged the show for the Flower Show Association.

The husbands showed up all right. That wasn't the point. Yet it was the point at that, for hubby showed up so much that the men stole the show, and it turned out to be a bitter pill for the little woman who had always brought home the garden club ribbons.

There were John Patterson, the sweepstakes winner in the horticultural class; Roby Robinson, Henry Grady III and Gus Ashcraft, strutting around the club last night insisting that they were rootin' tootin' he-men, even if their exhibits did win the top places in their special class.

Take He-Man Robinson's exhibit for instance. It won the blue ribbon in the Presidents' Husbands' Class. (Just between the girls, He-Man Robinson had a lucky break, for he substituted as a President's Husband, for Arthur Harris, whose Misus, head of the Peachtree Garden Club, was out of town. Mrs. Robinson is vice president.)

Robinson's exhibit took on the atmosphere of disgust, careless abandon and done with a to-hell-with-it-all attitude. Seems he has a book on "Design in Flower Arrangement" and tried to figure out the best thing he could do with some mums, some wire, a vase and some leaves in a "niche of black corrugated cardboard" as per rules and regulations.

But He-Man Robinson had an idea. Why not let the design reflect just how he felt about the whole thing? Well, he threw the book down in a devil-may-care manner, left two sad looking buds in a vase, dumped the shears, the plumbers wire, and the pin holders in a heap at the base of the niche and then, to end it all, stuffed the remaining mums, heads down into the wastepaper basket.

Then He-Man Henry Grady III decided that he-men liked the sea and an Old Salt would probably drag his fishing net into any arrangement, so he went nautical for his design and walked off with second prize.

He-Man Gus Ashcraft mixed humor with patriotism to win third place with his arrangement of white mums. After all, he-men and defense work go hand in hand, so he made a large "V" arrangement out of white mums, offset it in front with an eight ball and backed it with a cue and the following verse: England's "V" for Victory, "Q" for quick; look behind the eight ball is Russia's licked.

eventually making peace with a legitimate and honorable German government, on the basis of a new organization of Europe, and a new constellation of the relations between Europe, the Americas, and the British empire?

I confess that I do not quite know what or which is our policy. I confess I do not know whether the Anglo-American-Russian collaboration aims to defeat Germany on land or to defeat Hitler and Hitlerism.

It is essential that we should know which we intend to do, because the strategy in the two cases would not be the same.

If we aim to defeat the German armies in the field, then we must count on a gigantic battlefield where a decisive military decision can be obtained.

The possibility of establishing such a battlefield diminishes daily. Such a battlefield might have been maintained in Russia had the British and Americans been prepared.

But if the Russians are driven to the Urals, it is beyond my power to see how a position can be

Tables Turned As Reds Launch New Offensive

Soviets Report Fresh Inroads on German Supply Lines.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. MOSCOW, Nov. 5.—The German drive on Moscow has been stopped dead everywhere and in at least one area of the Donets basin the Nazis are in retreat, "leaving behind them heaps of dead and many guns," the Russians announced officially tonight in a broadcast.

The Germans are now burying their huge tanks for use as pillboxes to counter a big Red counterdrive, the Moscow radio said. Trenches also are being dug for Nazi infantrymen, it added.

This development followed a big two-day Soviet land and air attack which it was said destroyed 176 Nazi tanks, 25 field guns, a long supply convoy of 350 ammunition and infantry trucks, and 30 tank trucks, the Soviets said.

At Tula, 100 miles south of Moscow, the Russians said the fighting was continuing, too—"but the enemy is not fighting with the same ardor as when he began the offensive."

The official radio announcement summed up the military situation thus:

Three days ago a big Red counteroffensive began on the right flank, presumably in the Kalinin area 25 miles northwest of Moscow, after stopping a German drive which left hundreds of Nazi dead on the field.

The Red tank forces then destroyed 15 Nazi tanks and cut through the German ranks to mow down 300 more Nazis in one engagement and 600 in another.

In the Maloyaroslavets sector, 65 miles southwest of the capital, where the German drive now has been halted for a month, the Russians claimed to have "severely mauled" a number of German divisions.

Smashing 67 German tanks in the Mozhaisk area, 37 miles west of Moscow, during last night's operations, the Nazis were said to have gone on the defensive and the Russians recaptured a village where heaps of Germans lay in the streets.

The 68th and 69th German regiments were declared to have suffered severely in the Volokolamsk area.

U.S. and British Foreign Policy Needs Clarity, Thompson Says

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

It is time to make a searching analysis and criticism of the tactics and strategy of the British-American foreign policy, political and military. For it needs to be said bluntly that so far it lacks for the public, at least, clarity, energy, unity and purpose.

A question that must be asked is the obvious one: For what purpose have we called up for service over a million men? For what purpose are we engaged in an undeclared naval war, as a result of a decision to feed and arm Britain and Russia?

The President has said at various times: to keep the war away from the Western Hemisphere and to defeat Hitler. And obviously we must create a large and efficient army for service in case of unforeseeable developments in this hemisphere.

What, however, does defeating Hitler mean?

Does it mean defeating the German armies in the field? Or does it mean defeating the Hitler regime in Germany, and established there which would promise victory. No one knows how much equipment and material the Russians have lost, but it must be gigantic—possibly two-thirds of all they had. And, whether they have or have not destroyed everything behind their retreating armies, a thing I gravely doubt, they have certainly lost their chief basic industries, so that there is no possibility of replacement on the former scale. There is no shortage of manpower, but to have to equip it with weapons sent half way around the world in submarine-infested seas, unloading at highly dubious ports, is no prospect to enchant the mind of any strategist.

Will the battlefield be in the Middle East—the Armageddon of the Bible—next spring, perhaps, or the one after that?

If so, what will be the relative size and advantages of the forces? Let us pretend that the Germans have lost by then a million and a half or even two million men.

Defense Crowding Swamps Water Supply Programs

Concentration of Army camps and defense housing projects in the southeast has changed the carefully laid plans of state public health engineering departments into just so many scraps of paper.

Other states have been affected in varying degrees, but none more drastically than Georgia.

Somewhat sadly, L. M. Clarkson, head of the Georgia Public Health Engineering Department, informed Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health:

"The national defense program has caused a change in all plans and procedures for maintaining the adequacy and safety of all public water supply and sewerage systems."

Staff Overworked. Clarkson says that in addition "the department has supplied from its trained and experienced staff a large number of reserve officers for active duty. The deficiency caused by this situation has been met partially by increasing to the limit of physical endurance the services of that part of the staff remaining in a civilian status."

Military camps constructed near small towns, says Clarkson, often were found to consume more water than the entire civilian population, thus constituting a load on the local water supply system never contemplated. By working overtime, the department managed to "strengthen the protective services and increased the degree of vigilance required in the procurement and purification of many millions of gallons of water."

Inaugurated Discussions. When it became evident that the Army intended to establish huge cantonments in Georgia, the department inaugurated discussions regarding sewage disposal facilities and protection against stream pollution.

In this matter, Clarkson says: "The highly decentralized plan of the War Department for constructing new camps and industries has led to a long series of difficulties in securing proper sewage treatment plants for Army life.

"The health engineering department has insisted in each instance on compliance with proper standards of sewage treatment and has enforced this through its system of control in approving plans and specifications before construction of military sewerage plants is begun."

"The application of this system of requiring sewage treatment for military establishments has required many protests to the highest authority in the military departments responsible for the construction of camps and defense industries."

Starnes and Copeland spent Tuesday night in jail on charges of violating terms of a peace warrant.

Two Strikers Steel Strike Are Released Picture Untrue, From Jail Here Union Says

Bonds Set at $2,500 Each on Peace War-rant Charge.

After a night in Fulton tower, R. E. Starnes, president of SWOC local 2401, on strike at the Atlantic Steel Company's plant, and one of his pickets, E. V. Copeland, a roller, were released yesterday afternoon on bonds of $2,500 each. Their attorneys, Roger Prestwood and Warren Hall Jr., had obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Judge Hugh Dorsey of Fulton superior court, returnable at 11 o'clock in the morning. Before that time, however, Judge Robert Carpenter, of Fulton civil court, who the day before had committed the two men to jail without bond on peace warrants, changed his mind and fixed the bonds.

There was considerable discussion as to whether the habeas corpus proceedings would be necessary, but defense attorneys finally decided to follow them through and their plea was heard in the afternoon.

Appearing as representative for the steel company before his father to oppose the plea, by consent of the defense, was Hugh Dorsey Jr., who stated that he would prefer the proceedings be heard by another judge.

The defense contended that it was illegal for Judge Carpenter to fail to fix a bond under a peace warrant and that, further, if his action was legal, the $2,500 bonds he later fixed were excessive.

After hearing statements on both sides, Judge Dorsey ruled that Judge Carpenter had not abused his authority and that the amount of bail was not excessive. Bonds for Starnes and Copeland were supplied by professional bondsmen.

SWOC Leader Attacks Statements Made in Walkout.

The picture of the walkout of union workers at the Atlantic Steel Company being presented by the company is not a true one, Joseph K. Gaither, sub-regional director of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, charged yesterday.

Union officials asked The Constitution to present the union's side of the dispute in an interview with Gaither and union members. Gaither asserted that production of finished goods at the steel mill has been stopped and that only about 4 per cent of the total plant is in operation, with far fewer than 500 men at work as claimed by the company.

Blames Company. He declared that the union is willing to settle the dispute before a federal labor conciliation board or the Defense Mediation Board but that the company refuses.

He asserted that reports union men on the picket line at the plant carry guns are untrue, and said also that charges Negro pickets cursed white men and threatened them with guns are false.

"Negroes are citizens of the United States and they have a right to picket," Gaither said. "We have used them on the picket line to talk to Negro workers at the mill. They do not picket white workers. They do not meet with the white union members but hold their meetings at the Y."

He charged the police have "escorted" food trucks through the picket lines after the drivers had turned back voluntarily, and accused the officers of threatening pickets with their guns.

Corroboration Given. More than a dozen members of the local Union, No. 2401, at headquarters corroborated his assertions.

The union director charged the Atlantic Steel Company with hundreds of violations of the wage-hour law and the Walsh-Healy act, and pointed out that more than 800 of the union members at the mill have filed suit in federal court seeking between $140,000 and $180,000 which they claim is due them for violations of the wage-hour law since 1939.

Gaither's staff yesterday was gathering check stubs of workers paid under the minimum steel wage of 45 cents an hour, he pointed out.

"Many of these workers drew pay at 27 cents and 30 cents an hour when the law clearly and definitely stated that the pay should be 45 cents," said Gaither. "The company also worked the men as high as 14 hours a day and marked up their time cards at eight hours per day."

Claim 1,000 Members. Union members present declared they had worked for 30 and 35 cents an hour when the prescribed rate was 45.

"When the election was held in July to determine the bargaining agency for the workers, the workers voted 770 for this union and 327 voted against it," Gaither asserted. "Since that time, 222 men have joined the union and our membership is approximately 1,000. The total employment at the plant is about 1,300."

Gaither and the men admitted that the open hearth furnaces of the mill are operating, but claimed that two of the hoop mills are closed down and one is operating only part time with a staff of six experienced men.

"The company claims to the government they are producing materials for defense and are not hampered," Gaither said. "We know that nothing is being shipped from the plant because the finishing mills are not operating. They are producing raw steel but no nails, fences, wire and rods."

Macon's 'Sleep-Walking' Clerk Can't Sleep-Walk So Far Now

Judge Bascom S. Deaver Imposes 5-Year Sentence After Nolo Contendere Plea Is Entered in $30,000 Theft From a Registered Mail Pouch.

MACON, Ga., Nov. 5.—(AP)—The Macon mail clerk who blamed sleepwalking for the disappearance of $30,000 from a registered mail pouch is under a five-year sentence for stealing the money.

Judge Bascom S. Deaver heard Henry Leonard Chaney's story in court yesterday and pronounced sentence when Chaney entered a plea of nolo contendere.

Detectives questioned the mail clerk soon after the money was missed. He denied any knowledge of the theft, but later suggested that he might have taken the money while sleepwalking. Questioned by detectives while asleep, he led them on a midnight trek into the woods where the money was found.

Officers who made the search with Chaney said he apparently continued to sleep during the entire march. By his plea of nolo contendere Chaney placed the decision of guilt and punishment entirely in the hands of Judge Deaver.

Road Building Cut Sharply in Past 10 Months

1941 Budget $1,862,355; Over 12 Million Spent in '40.

A drastic curtailment in road construction during the first 10 months of this year has enabled the State Highway Department to pay off approximately $9,000,000 of its $20,000,000 debt, Chairman W. E. Wilburn pointed out yesterday in a report prepared for submission to the Governor.

The chairman added he anticipated a further reduction of $4-

000,000 in the highway debt by the end of this fiscal year. In addition, the report said, the department has safeguarded $3,300,000 in federal funds through matching of state funds. The 1941 budget called for only $1,862,355.16 in construction by contract as compared with expenditures of $12,447,214.97 during the first 10 months of 1940. Construction by state forces was $804,575.98 as against $6,863,444.03; maintenance $1,077,424.10 as against $1,754,176.06; equipment purchases, $618.63 as against $3,027,607.44, and administration, $346,158.81 as against $868,049.47.

Way To See Circus Is To Take a Child

Martin Tells Wonders Offspring Encounter Under Big Top.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

The way to see a circus is to take a child along. That way a man who has forgotten that there are marvels and wonders in the world can remember them again. All that glitters suddenly becomes, not gilt but purest gold, not paste, but really diamonds. And all the universe is peopled with the creatures, brave and gay and beautiful, that a child's eyes see.

Through the sweating palm of a starry-eyed little fellow some magic current seems to pass to the hand it clutches. And when child and parent come together to the place where the lions and tigers are, Four and Forty are one in age, and one in awe and wonderment.

War, Taxes Forgotten. "Children of all ages," the announcer addresses them as the fanfare sounds. And, as he speaks, the world of war and taxes, of worry and of work, fades and is forgotten.

And it's really Mother Goose out there, and Old King Cole himself, and the actual House That Jack Built, and the very four-and-twenty blackbirds who were silly enough to get themselves baked into a pie.

For the only real things are the things you believe in—and with a child at the circus you believe in everything.

Squeals of Wonderment. Yesterday was the children's day and there must have been a thousand there, despite the rain and mud. They came in clutching tightly to a parent's hand, big eyes roving, and, at first, the air was alive with their squeals of wonderment. But wonders thrice confounded seemed to awe them, and then they just gazed—and asked questions!

"Daddy, what is that funny thing?"

"That is an ibex, son. An ibex is a kind of deer."

"Daddy, why does the kinofdeer scratch its back with its horns?"

"Ohhhhh, mommee! What is that?"

"That is a hippopotamus, darling."

"Mommee, why does the hippopotamus go to sleep in its bathtub? Do hippopotamus eat people, Mommee? Do they eat little children?"

Plea for Peanuts. "Mommee, can I have some peanuts for myself, Mommee, please, may I?"

"No, darling. Peanuts aren't good for children. Children must eat things that make them big and strong."

"But, Mommee, the elephant eats peanuts and he is big and strong. Can I have some peanuts to eat for myself, Mommee?"

The question asking period lasted awhile. Then chubby legs began to tire. Above the adult heads beanie-crowned caps began to sprout, and hands gummy with popcorn were clasped around parental necks. There was too much to see, too many questions that needed answering. Curiosity gave way to silent, unquestioning wonder.

Inside the Big Top, seated, far-

RUB-A-DUB-DUB—The three men in a tub, no less. Part of the great parade of Mother Goose characters with which Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey this afternoon and tonight will delight the souls of countless children—and a good many grown-ups, too.

ther away from the awe-inspiring beasts and fowl, little tongues began to waggle again. The animals doing tricks, the pretty lady riding the horse, the man on the flying trapeze, and the marvelous parade of the creatures of the nursery rhymes, revived flagging curiosity, and the circus was a wondrous place once more.

But long after, when the acrobats and the tumblers and the horse that danced to music and the clown with the bulb in the end of his nose, had come and gone, it was just the older folk in whom the fire of interest still burned brightly. Weary after half an hour of trying to get Papa and Mama to "Come on and let's go home," huddled in their seats, worn out by marvel piled on marvel, the little folks were asleep.

DONALSONVILLE, Ga., Nov. 5. According to County Agent W. E. Brigham there was an increase in cotton production in Seminole county this year over 1940. The number of bales in 1940 was 2,764, compared with 2,978 bales reported this year.

Ickes Sees U. S. Sending Britain More Tankers

New Shortage of Domestic, Aviation Gasoline Forecast.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—(AP) The United States may have to supply Britain with many more tankers than it has loaned in the past and it may yet be confronted with a shortage of domestic as well as aviation gasoline, Harold Ickes, federal petroleum co-ordinator, told the oil industry today.

Although some of the 50 tankers originally loaned have been returned and the projected release of others has been announced, this country's commitments, Ickes said, require the furnishing of additional oil boats in case England asks for more.

"I suspect," he added, "that the tanker situation will be a troublesome one" for the duration of the emergency.

Addressing the American Petroleum Institute, Ickes stated that even if the American oil industry doubled its 100-octane aviation gasoline production by January 1, 1943, bringing the output to about 100,000 barrels daily, the supply would still be far short of the needs of the United States, Britain, Russia and China.

"We are not even sure," he continued, "that we have sufficient capacity for producing all of the ordinary gasoline that we will need. Our refineries of motor fuel are now pretty close to 100 per cent capacity and the demand continues to rise."

Disclaiming any desire to impose governmental control on the industry, Ickes warned the oil men that, unless wasteful practices were eliminated, some form of federal regulations was certain.

He asserted that despite the claims of railroad officials about the availability of tank cars, surveys showed only a limited number available for movement of gasoline to the eastern seaboard. Despite this, he added, the tanker movement in that respect by mid-October was at the rate of 627 daily, "a monumental accomplishment."

Wage Increase Recommended For Rail Men

Strike Threat Grows as Both Sides Express Disappointment.

By The Associated Press.

The threat of a railroad strike grew more serious tonight despite a presidential board's recommendation that 1,250,000 employees of the nation's carriers be granted temporary wage increases and that 900,000 of them be given vacations with pay.

Chiefs of five operating brotherhoods stated at Chicago that the recommendations, falling short of demands, were "most disappointing" and said they could not recommend them to the rank and file of union membership. However, no strike can be started for 30 days, under the railway mediation act.

Although railroad bonds advanced on the New York market, spokesmen for carriers also expressed disappointment at the board's recommendations, saying the burden would be too great.

The fact-finding board which was commissioned by President Roosevelt to look into the dispute said the increases and vacations would raise operating costs about $270,000,000 a year.

They were recommended, the board added, on the assumption that the roads could obtain permission to increase their freight and passenger rates an estimated five per cent to meet the added expense.

The recommendations fell far short of the demands of the five operating brotherhoods, with their 350,000 members, and the 14 non-operating unions, numbering about 900,000 members.

The operating organizations had asked wage increases of about 30 per cent from an estimated present minimum of $5.36 a day. The board recommended increases of 7 1/2 per cent.

The non-operating groups wanted 30 to 40 cents an hour more than the 35 to 85 cents an hour they now receive. The board suggested an additional nine cents an hour, or an average increase of 13 1/2 per cent.

The board also proposed that the 40,000 or more employees of the Railway Express Company be granted increases of 7 1/2 cents an hour.

Effective September 1. All wage recommendations as proposed by the board would be effective as of September 1, 1941, and terminate automatically on December 31, 1942, unless an extension was mutually agreed upon.

It was suggested that the wage structure of the railroads be examined about December 31, 1942, "in light of existing economic conditions" of the industry and the country.

The board also recommended: 1. One-week vacations, effective January 1, 1942, for the employees of the 14 non-operating unions.

2. A permanent basic minimum wage of 40 cents an hour for employees of short-line roads, and 45 cents an hour for employees of class A roads and the Railway Express Agency.

3. That a dispute between the unions and the roads over working rules be resubmitted for further consideration under the railway labor act.

The five members of the board presented their report in person to the President.

Stout Again Named Head Of Bank Body

Morris Plan Bankers End Convention at Sea Island.

SEA ISLAND, Ga., Nov. 5.—(AP) Richard H. Stout, of Washington, was re-elected president of the Morris Plan Bankers' Association today at adjournment of the 1941 convention.

In his presidential message to the convention, Stout, formerly of Louisville, Ky., said one result of the current world upheaval would be wider distribution of wealth and added that this meant "a complete realignment of the wealth structure of the country."

A midwinter meeting of Morris Plan bankers will convene in Louisville February 22-23, with 20 cities in Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee and West Virginia represented, said Jesse F. Steng, member of the board of governors and executive vice president of the Morris Plan Industrial Bank, Louisville.

The convention elected Ralph Pitman, of Philadelphia and Richmond, Va., first vice president, and Russell Sayre, of Springfield, Mass., second vice president.

New members named to the board of governors were Robert Bonnell, of Baltimore; C. T. Miller, of New York city; Carl Sorenson, of Denver; Horace McCowan, of Worcester, Mass.; R. E. Wise, of Dayton, Ohio; Lebron Kinchley, of Tampa, Fla.; Willard G. Barker, of Washington, and George Smith, of Chattanooga.

The executive committee chosen was Bonnell and Miller; Charles Bryant, Des Moines; B. E. Forster, Knoxville; M. S. Richardson, Akron, Ohio; Milton Bradley, New Haven, Conn.; and Harry Small, Cleveland, Ohio.

Fulton Digs Deeper, Finds Act Halting DeKalb Claim on Lot 9

There will be no boundary line dispute between Fulton and DeKalb counties such as has developed between Georgia and Tennessee.

DeKalb county recently compiled a field book for taxation purposes. In the course of their research, the compilers found a statement in Cooper's history of Fulton county that the legislature had in 1856 transferred land lot 9, of the 17th district, from Fulton to DeKalb county, just two years after another legislature had transferred the same territory from DeKalb to Fulton.

DeKalb tax collectors then began to cast eyes on land lot 9, between Kingsboro, Eulalia and Roxboro roads, a modern subdivision with taxable property worth at least a million dollars.

Their hopes were dashed when Fulton county officials unearthed an act of the legislature of 1874 repealing the transfer of land lot 9 to DeKalb.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Tito Schipa has thrown over all his American engagements to return to Italy at once at Count Ciano's bidding. Albert Morini, the tenor's American manager, said today.

Schipa cabled from Rio de Janeiro recently that he had received a letter from Ciano asking him to go to Italy in March to "sing in a concert series," Morini said.

Engagements had been arranged in some 40 cities, including appearances in the Metropolitan

112 British Destroyers Sunk, Germans Claim

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—(AP)—DNB today listed 112 British destroyers as sunk to date by Germany. (The British have acknowledged the loss of 57.) The news agency's compilation said the German navy had sunk 65 and the air force 47.

Opera, Chicago Opera, San Francisco Opera, and a tour from coast to coast, Morini said. "Evidently, however, his loyalty to Ciano and the Italian government was greater than commitments he knew about here."

U. S., Canada Move To Weld Defense Work

Joint Production Group Named By F. D. R. and Prime Minister.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(INS) The United States and Canada tonight moved swiftly to weld the North American continent into a giant production unit under the all-out program drafted Sunday by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister MacKenzie King.

The President announced the creation and membership in a joint defense production committee of 12 to speed the task by mobilizing the last ounce of resources in both countries.

Chairman of the six-man American delegation is Milo Perkins, executive director of the Economic Defense Board. G. K. Sheils, deputy minister of the Department of Munitions and Supply, heads the Canadian contingent.

Scope of Committee. Announcement by the White House of the far-reaching step stated that the committee specifically will:

"Survey the capacity and potential capacity for the production of defense material in each country to the end that in mobilizing the resources of the two countries each country should provide for the common defense effort, the defense articles it is best able to produce."

At the same time the committee was instructed to minimize as far as consistent with the maximum defense effort by both countries all maladjustments in the postwar era.

Reviewing previous joint-defense steps by the United States and Canada, it was pointed out that the present permanent joint board and defense covered the field of military strategy; that the joint materials co-ordinating committee was handling distribution of primary materials, and that the joint economic committee now governed the field of general economic relations.

The new group, it was stated, will thus fill the only remaining gap, i. e., co-ordinating capacity for defense production.

In addition to Perkins and Sheils the committee is composed of:

American: J. V. Forrestal, undersecretary of the Navy; W. H. Harrison, OPM production director; R. P. Patterson, undersecretary of war; E. R. Stettinius Jr., lease-lend administrator; H. L. Vickery, vice chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Canadian: J. R. Donald, director general chemicals and explosives; H. J. Carmichael, director general munitions production; R. P. Bell, director general aircraft production; H. R. MacMillan, president War-time Shipping, Inc.; Walter Gordon, department finances.

Telling Us To Crawl

The United States has been told the price of craven surrender for peace in the Pacific.

A Tokyo newspaper controlled by the Japanese foreign office lists seven points for that surrender. A recapitulation reveals the astounding character of the program "offered" the United States.

- (1) Stop all military and economic aid to Chungking by all foreign states and cease all propaganda or military missions to keep Chungking at war with Japan. America could advise Chungking to make its peace with Japan.
- These are the first terms. By observing them, the United States would join the Axis against Great Britain and would, in effect, win the China war for Japan.
- (2) Leave China completely free to deal with Japan, and therefore end hostilities and establish economic co-operation.
- In other words, leave China to her fate, which would be surrender to the war lords of Nippon.
- (3) Stop encirclement of Japan by military, naval and air bases and by economic barriers. Proceed no further with military and naval movements in the western Pacific under the pretext of defense.

It should be pointed out that Japan herself completed encirclement by extension of her sway to Indo-China. Under this point there would be no further fortification or preparation of defense in the Philippines, which then would fall as a ripe plum to the Nipponese. All co-operation with Great Britain and the Netherlands and China would be halted—again, the United States would join the Axis.

- (4) Acknowledge Japan's co-prosperity sphere, her leadership in the western Pacific and, in doing so, leave Manchukuo, China, Indo-China, Thailand, the (Netherlands East) Indies and other states and protectorates to establish their own political and economic relations with Japan without interference of any kind.

This point simply means the United States abandon all these states to Japan for conquest.

- (5) Recognize Manchukuo.
- The then Secretary of State Stimson settled that question some 10 years ago. It won't be done.

- (6) Stop at once, unconditionally, the freezing of Japan's assets and China's assets in America, Britain, the Indies and wherever that provocative measure is applied.

How this would be accomplished is somewhat of a mystery. It assumes American control of the actions of the governments of some widely assorted states.

- (7) Restore the trade treaties, abolish all restrictions on shipping and commerce, undo everything wrongfully done in the name of peace but with the design for war, whether economic or military.

This would mean the absolute reversal of United States policy, the abandonment of Britain and all our allies, an abject surrender of all the principles for which the United States has stood for centuries.

If this is the price of peace in the Pacific, if the alternative is war, let it be war.

A strike of snake charmers in India is among the newly reported tiups. We have troubles, but uncharmed snakes are not among them, we are happy to say.

Unwise Act

An Ohio church Sunday broke into the news with the burning of "Mein Kampf" on the altar.

It is to be hoped few other pastors will be so unwise as to follow the example of this Ohio minister, however well-intentioned his act might have been.

Perhaps the country would better understand the Nazi charts of world conquest if more persons had read this "Mein Kampf" that was burned on the altar Sunday.

Book-burning is a Nazi device for the suppression of knowledge. Of course, the Nazis didn't invent it, but they did a thorough job of it.

That is something we neither want nor need in this country. Leave "Mein Kampf" on the shelves—every copy of it—for too few persons have read it or know of its contents and implications.

Life in '61 to '65 was trying, perhaps, and yet there wasn't this continual mooning over what Lincoln would have done.

A Daughter of Wesleyan

More than thirty years ago, in 1908, there came to Wesleyan College, at Macon, a young girl from China, to join the student body. She was Mei-ling Soong. She quickly became one of the most popular girls on the campus. She stayed at Wesleyan for five years.

Today the little Mei-ling Soong is Madame Chiang Kai-shek, wife of China's great leader in her hour of greatest trial and, according to all observers, herself as vital a contributor to the defense of the new China as her distinguished husband.

A famous artist, Lazar Raditz, has painted a portrait of Madame Chiang Kai-shek. It is on display at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta. It is a marvellous piece of work.

The artist has given the picture to the China Emergency Relief Committee which, under the chairmanship of the noted novelist, Pearl Buck, is striving to raise $1,000,000 in this country toward meeting the terrible needs of China's war-ravaged civilian population.

So, the committee has agreed to sell the portrait now here, for $1,500, and to give the entire sum to the cause of China Relief.

And the alumnae association of Wesleyan believes the portrait should, by every right, hang at Wesleyan, a permanent reminder of a great woman who was educated there. So they are trying to raise the required $1,500 for the portrait's purchase.

They point out that not only will they thus secure the painting for Wesleyan, but at the same time they will make a contribution to China sufficient to feed 1,500 otherwise starving children, for a month, to provide anesthetics for 22,500 operations or to use in a myriad other needed ways.

All who can spare something to aid the alumnae association are asked to send contributions either to Mrs. W. H. Lewis, at 1061 Cumberland road, treasurer of the Atlanta Wesleyan Alumnae Association, or to Mrs. Harold C. McKenzie, of 4001 Club drive, Atlanta, national president of the association.

The prudent hunter will remember not to wear a coonskin cap into the wilds. True, Daniel Boone did, but at the time he owned the only rifle in Kentucky.

New Danger

Japan's demands upon Portugal for the port of Macao constitute a direct threat against the United States.

Japanese control of that port will gain for that country control of the terminus of America's air transport to the Far East. Macao is situated just west of Hongkong on the south China coast and is the terminus of Pan-American's China Service. It is the entry port of all United States air communication with Chungking.

The demands upon Portugal follow the typical Axis policy of following minor concessions with greater demands. It will be recalled the Japanese have obtained air base rights from Portugal in Timor, dangerously near the Australian naval base of Darwin and threatening the Netherlands Indies.

If Portugal yields the port of Macao, it is almost axiomatic that Germany will demand concessions on the vital Atlantic islands, probably with equally satisfactory results.

The United States should obtain from Portugal satisfactory assurances Axis demands will not be met. If it cannot, then immediate action against the Azores should be instituted. They are too vital in the world conflict to be trusted to the tender mercies of small states which profess their determination, yet surrender their independence.

They think the stage is being once more set for that big tableau, "the peace offer," with the Fuehrer trying to fish an olive out of a bottle with a bayonet.

Georgia Editors Say:

THANKS TO THE PEOPLE.
(From The Brunswick News)

Despite his angry denial that he had "recanted"—as proclaimed by a headline in an Atlanta paper—Governor Talmadge appears to have definitely backed water in the university row.

The chief executive now says that he wants "this whole unfortunate matter cleared up" and has given the Board of Regents the right to review and veto any action he has taken, with regard to the University System, within the last six months.

If Talmadge is sincere in that, it is about the smartest thing he could possibly do. If there is a single issue which could turn him out of office next year, it is the educational issue.

One would like to believe that this counterpart of Huey Long has seen the light and that in the future his acts will be tempered not only with reason but with common decency. But hosannas may be a bit premature. What the Governor says sounds strangely like double-talk. Talmadge says the regents may veto his recent actions but says this does not mean that they can re-hire Dean Cocking. It may be—and one hopes this is the proper interpretation—that Talmadge is being stubborn to the bitter end just because he hates to admit defeat. The Governor knows how to win—as his political record shows—but he never has learned how to lose gracefully. Defeat is more bitter than gall to Talmadge.

A great opportunity confronts the Board of Regents. It has the opportunity of restoring education in Georgia to the high plane it deserves. We can think of no better way it would make amends for the Talmadge-dictated wrongs it has done than to re-hire Dean Cocking and Marvin Pittman. Such a step would go a long way in healing the breach which has developed between the people on one hand and Talmadge and the regents on the other.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

WHY THE ATTACK ON RUSSIA? Much has been written about the motives which are presumed to have prompted Hitler to scrap a ten-year nonaggression pact he had with Russia and order an invasion of the country last June.

Competent diplomatic observers have appraised his act in various ways: He was badly in need of vital mineral and oil supplies available in the Caucasus. He wanted to increase Germany's food reserves by taking over the vast Ukrainian bread basket. Most of all, perhaps, he wanted to close his back door against possible attack from the only remaining large standing army he had to fear in Europe—this as a prelude to his plans for the invasion of Britain.

All of these and other individual factors undoubtedly played a part in his decision, but it has been left to Senator Walter F. George, one of the keenest observers of war events in congress, to give a broader meaning to the Hitler plans.

DREAMS OF WORLD DOMINATION The Georgia senator, past chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee and present head of the Committee on Finance, develops the thesis that it was not merely these things, but rather world domination, that caused Hitler to move against Russia. In a comprehensive speech during debate on the neutrality act revision bill, he told the senate the other day that anyone looking at the history of Europe for the past five years cannot reach any other conclusion.

No alarmist, Senator George's words, which showed evidence of careful thought, are worthy of the most mature consideration. Here is the interpretation he makes of Hitler's Russian invasion:

"It seems to me that no one can look at the history of the last five years of Europe and not know that the purpose of Hitler is undoubtedly world domination. You might not want to rely on his word, and you might not want to take anybody else's conclusion for it, but if you will go back to January of the present year and follow events in Europe, and follow them impartially, you cannot escape the conclusion that Hitler's whole program is world domination, and he does not separate the commercial from the military arm of his government."

"Indeed, his commerce is tied to the arms of Germany. Indeed, he proposes to use the army for commercial purposes, to get breathing room in Europe, to expand; and it means world domination."

COULD HAVE HAD SUPPLIES "Why?" Any reasonable person must know that Hitler could have gotten from Russia everything the Russians had in January and February of 1941. They were in an alliance; they had a peace pact under which both—hypocritically, perhaps—had agreed they would not make war on each other, it is true, but Russia would have permitted Hitler to have gotten any quantity of her oil, any quantity of her wheat, any quantity of her minerals, and she would not have struck at Hitler.

"Hitler knew that. But what else did he know? He knew that he could never dominate all of Europe and become the dominant power on this earth without destroying Russia. He not only needed her supplies, but he needed her out of the way."

"When history is finally written, in my judgment there will be no answer to the question of a direct motive and purpose that moved Hitler to move his armies eastward against Russia in 1941, save his resolve to become the absolute master. That kind of ambition cannot be limited to one continent. Hitler could never be the dominating world power and the force that he dreamed of being, and resolved to become, if a challenge could be offered him from the whole western hemisphere. He knows that."

ALL EVIDENCE IS IN "The very same logic, the very same reason, and the very same spirit that drove him against a power nominally his friend—certainly not active against him, but ready and willing to give him everything if he could only save her peace and her life—would drive him to challenge the authority of the western hemisphere. Do not doubt it. All the evidence is in."

"I do not say," continued the senator, "that he would be over tomorrow, the next day, or the day after, in a threat to any part of the western hemisphere. But as certainly as the sun shines, if he becomes the absolute master of Europe, he will challenge the mastery of any nation or group of nations in the western hemisphere. We all know, from many things that perhaps we have not loudly proclaimed, that he might move rapidly in an area which we are content to defend, not only because of our own vital self-interest, but because of solemn treaty obligations and because of the Monroe Doctrine itself."

"That is the situation as I view it. I do not intend to argue the matter from the standpoint of the vital interest of the United States in every act short of actual war by our government to stop the aggressions of the Axis group, and to stop them wherever they can be stopped, because long ago I concluded that we had a vital interest in doing exactly that, and in our own proper defense."

This Is Too Tricky.

The scheme which I plan to describe here today may, or may not, be in strict, technical adherence to the law. It seems to me to be a direct violation, but I am no lawyer and, therefore, am not in position to pass judgment upon its legality.

But, even if it should turn out to be technically correct, I'd still insist it violates the spirit of the law, and is emphatically a mean trick, a piece of finagling which decent businessmen, with a proper regard for ethics and the Golden Rule, would not practice. Personally, I know only one firm that stoops to this method of short-changing its employees. There may be others using the same system. If so, more shame to them.

This Is How It Works.

Here's how it works. You seek a position with this firm, let us suppose. You are an office worker, with a normal salary rating of $20 or $25 a week. They employ you at what, you are led to believe, is a salary of $20 a week. Maybe the person who does the hiring uses some ambiguous phrase, such as "you'll earn not less than $20 a week." Or something like that. Anyway, you believe, as you are expected to believe, you are going to work for $20 a week salary. You wouldn't work for less, anyway.

Now, to make the rest of it clear, you must recall one or two of the laws enacted in recent years.

First of all, the wage and hour law. This sets the minimum wage you may receive at $16 a week. And the maximum hours you may work at 40 per week.

Then remember the social security law and its provision that one per cent of your salary is deducted each week and kept by the government to be repaid to you, in the form of a pension, when you reach the age of 65. Your employer also pays an additional per cent for you.

Remember, too, that if you are unemployed you may claim unemployment benefits which are scaled according to the salary you received when last employed.

Now, keep those things in mind and I'll tell you what this firm does.

The employee receives his, or her, first week's pay check. And find it tabulated as $16 salary and $4 advance against overtime. Thus, you see, the $20 is paid, but with a catch in it.

For soon the firm will ask that new employee to put in 10 additional hours of work, or more, a week to catch up with those $4 weekly "advances." Which means a work week of 50, instead of the legal 40 hours.

It is too tricky for words.

How It Affects Social Security.

Note, too, the firm thus gets out of paying 4 cents a week into that old age pension fund. For it pays 16 cents on the $16 dollars of so-called salary, and nothing on the $4 advance.

Likewise if, at a later date, the ex-employee applies for unemployment payments, those payments are based upon a salary of $16 a week, instead of $20, as it should be.

As I said at the beginning, it may be perfectly legal. But I doubt it. It seems to me not only to violate the wages and hours law, but the social security laws also.

And, likewise, I have no idea how many firms are doing this. I know of only one. Some good friends may be equally guilty. If they are, and I find it out, they'll lose a lot of the former respect I have felt for them. Not that it matters.

But I thought I'd tell it here as a word of warning. If you are applying for a job and there is any, no matter how slight, ambiguity about the salary you are to receive, be sure the exact amount and how it is to be paid, is clearly understood, both by you and the employer, before you go to work. Then they won't be able to work such a trick upon you.

Ambitious Plan for Week.

According to a headline which appeared in this very newspaper this week, someone in Atlanta has undertaken quite an ambitious job. The week has been, as you should know, National Book Week. The story, from the facile typewriter of Frank Drake, was about Atlanta's school children and what the week meant to them. But the headline writer kinder went overboard when he headed it "Atlanta School Children Learn All About Books and Libraries."

If that is true, if they learn "all" about books and libraries in one short week—to say nothing of a lifetime—I'd like to meet their teachers.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Monday, November 6, 1916:

"Impressive memorial services were held at the First Methodist church last night by the local camp of Wheeler's Confederate cavalry."

And Fifty Years Ago. From the news columns of Friday, November 6, 1891:

"Peter Daniels, Fulton county's condemned murderer, is reconciled to his fate, and his friends come to have accepted the situation pleasantly."

A Story That Flopped

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The recent testimony of some of the Hollywood movie magnates in the trial of George Browne and Willie Bioff, the underworld union-busters, has been a source of comfort to me, for it vindicates my conviction that there was a big story in Hollywood in the winter of 1938, even though I did lay an egg on the assignment. The Hollywood assignment was my own idea and it cost a lot of money and paid off in peanuts. I doubt that any newspaper reporter ever did worse and I remember that my revered employer felt the same way about it, for he wired me, after quite a while, to come on back.

There were sharp fumes of larceny in Hollywood about then, which could be sniffed in New York when the wind was right, but I looked up I was just naive, and I looked up Willie Bioff's union in the Hollywood phone book and found several listings all in the same address and, selecting one at random, asked for Mr. Bioff. At that time they were spelling his name Bioff and I knew nothing, about him except that he was supposed to have a police record in Chicago which, for a professional unioneer, would be more a citation of merit than an embarrassment. Several times I called Mr. Bioff, and each time the voice at the other end would say, "Naw, he ain't around. Naw, I dunno when he is going to be around. Naw, he don't want to talk to no reporters."

Can't Explain Casey

Then I went to Pat Casey, the labor relations man for the industry, and Mr. Casey puzzled me up by giving both Mr. Browne and Mr. Bioff a good reputation. He said they were gentlemen, but were pretty good unionneers, nevertheless, who had gouged a few raises out of the magnates; for the studio workers, hard hit by the long panic. He said they were tough, but that union agents had to be tough in dealing with these movie capitalists. How Mr. Casey could have been so innocent, he being so smart and so long acquainted with union relations in Hollywood, I just don't know. The best I can say for him is that he was dumb.

Another day I went out to one of the big studios. I wanted to see Mr. Joe Schenck and the press agent said he would fix it up for me to have a few minutes of that great man's busy day, but time was awasting and he was awasting of it, as I began to notice as the hours passed and my dead-line approached. He took me to the commissary for a snack and some air banter and then he took me around several sets to see the actors in their fascinating make-believe. But I kept nagging him about Mr. Schenck and finally he got me in.

Schenck Reticent

Mr. Schenck seemed to think I had come to get his autograph or ask him the secret of his success, for he would not stay on the subject of union relations or say anything against either Browne or Bioff and in about five minutes I was outside again. I recall that now because here Mr. Schenck had a chance to expose Browne and Bioff and get them off his neck, but he acted as though he hardly knew them.

A few days later an interview was arranged with one of the Warner Brothers. I forgot which one, but remember that he was vague on union relations and showed me about his premises, which held no interest for me, and finally, sat down and dictated a formal statement which said, in substance, that he wasn't saying anything.

A famous actress was a vice president of the screen actors and she agreed to give me an audience, but then said she would have to confer with her husband first. I forgot her name, honestly, but the husband of the moment was Franchot Tone. I sent word back that if the lady vice president of the union couldn't speak on union relations without being coached, why just skip it and save my time. So I never met the famous actress. Crawford, that was her name.

Payoff Operating

The story was there all the time. The payoff was operating and a lot of those on the management side were falsifying the books to cover up the graft and paying themselves enormous salaries and bonuses for this betrayal of their stockholders, as they have since admitted in court under oath.

One David Bernstein, for instance, the treasurer and vice president of Loew's who studied bookkeeping by mail and gets $243,000 a year for his unique services, faked entries on the books. Nick Schenck, Joe's brother, was busy on the play and Harry Warner, one of the brothers, testified that it was "good business" to pay the graft which was then concealed in padded expense vouchers or charged up as the cost of bribes to movie critics.

But the story is still no more than half told, but when this trial is over there will be further dispatches, you may be sure, about the business morals of the men in the movie industry.

A Blue Heron

From the mud-stained waters of the Atlanta river:
I saw a blue heron rise;
And spreading its wings on the evening air,
Mount up to the blue of the skies.

From a cloud, high up in the blue, there came
A snow white;
And together they higher and higher flew,
Till both were lost to sight.

Some day from the sin and stain of earth,
To the white heron, waiting there,
Beyond the blue of the sky.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

MATTER OF DIET This time I did not consult the doctor. I simply went to his office, walked in and said:

"I am not going to eat starches, such as potatoes, dried beans or peas. I am going to restrict myself to one slice of bread at each meal and it will be toasted. I will not use butter in any form."

"I will not use gravy. I will eat clear soups. I will avoid candy and sweets of all kinds, eating no desserts at all unless it be fruit or gelatin."

"I will reduce the amount of water drunk each day and will drink sparingly, if at all, at mealtime."

"I will eat lean meat, salads without dressing, and I will restrict the amount of milk to one glass per day."

"As a precaution I will take one vitamin B complex capsule per day."

"I will be nervous, unhappy, sad, and life will be dark."

"Good-day."

He just sat there with his mouth open. It was still open as I walked out.

I decided on this course because I am tired of two or three of my friends coming up to me and pulling out their pants to show how much room there is.

The latest to offend me was Quimby Melton, the esteemed editor of the esteemed Griffin News. When he appeared in the door I thought he was a college graduate coming to see if there was a job for a cub. He looked positively slyph-like.

He walked in and pulled out his pants. He had lost a yard of weight. His vest hung on him.

"I nearly went wild the first month," he said, "but after that it was pie. Figurative pie, of course," he said hastily. "Not real pie."

Mr. William S. Howland, of Time and Life, is another of the pants-pullers. He has worn out his pants in front by clutching them and pulling them out to show the slack. Mr. Howland is the very worst sort of company. He is melancholy. He is sad. He looks pale and wan. He is weak. But he can show a few inches of slack in his pants. That seems to compensate for the lack of French fried potatoes.

WORST EATING COMPANION Having made this decision, it was my misfortune to encounter Charlie Glenn at lunch. It would have been impossible to have met a worse table companion for lunch. Simply impossible. It ruined my luncheon to have him there. He was talking:

"We put those sweet potatoes in the Dutch oven and put hot coals over them," he said. "That's the only way to cook them. A sweet potato has to have some hot coals on it. When we broke them open they were sweet and mealy. We put a lot of butter on them and they were good eating."

"The real dish, though," he said, "was a backbone purloo."

"How is that cooked?" I asked, fingering my table knife and testing the blade.

"You put the backbone in an iron pot," he said, "and you season it well. When it is about done you put in some rice and cook it with the meat."

"At the same time," he said, "you have some black-eyed peas cooking. You use this rice cooked with the meat as the rice for the 'Skipping John.' A little cornbread and buttermilk goes along with this."

"I never can make up my mind which purloo I like the best, backbone purloo or chicken purloo. You put an old hen in and let her cook a long time and then put in your rice and it is mighty good, especially if you have a few dumplings in with the rice. Still, I think maybe the backbone is best. That meat along a hog's back is probably the best meat in the world."

I took a bite of my lean meat and a bit of the pineapple and wished I could throttle him.

"If you can just keep women out of a kitchen you can really do some cooking," he said. "They all think they know too much. Now, the way I cook a good, 10-pound roast with onions and apples is like this—"

I got up and left. The knife was too dull to use on him.

One of the greatest injustices of the world is that some persons can eat like a horse and still retain a shad-like front.

UNCLE ROBBIE The late Wilbert Robinson, the famous old Oriole and for years manager of Brooklyn's

"Daffiness Boys," never believed in dieting.

I have heard it attributed to others, but he was the first to say that everything a man really wanted to do was either fattening, immoral or bad for him.

He weighed a fine 270 pounds, ate more or less constantly, never passed up his beer, and lived well up into the seventies. His only advice was to keep the legs in shape. "A man," he said, "is no better than his legs. And no worse."

I recall once when three young Atlanta newspapermen started out with the Old Oriole. After the third day two of them felt very feeble and terrible and the third had been sent to a hospital. The two still on their feet were having trouble with boiled eggs and tea.

Uncle Robbie was discovered with a stein of beer and a large platter of sauerkraut and pig knuckles before him.

"Their legs were no good, I guess," said Uncle Robbie of the newspapermen, as he forked up some kraut and knuckle. "You've got to take care of your legs."

Uncle Robbie thought that if a man caught a cold it was because his legs were weakened.

"Don't go on a diet," said Uncle Robbie. "Just keep your legs in shape

We never thought to see the day when we would bow our heads and pray that Russian armies, with their flag, the Hammer and Sickle, would daily be victorious and, in a manner glorious, turn back their enemies... which proves that most of us are fickle.

Stalin, with omnipresent pipe, we looked on as a chunk of tripe, and hoped he'd sit upon a bomb to blow him into chowder; but, since he's hit his recent stride and seems to be upon our side, we cheer him as he does his stuff and praise him long and louder.

We used to think of Russian dopes as unfamiliar with soaps, a crew of low-browed peasantry as dumb as swine or cattle; but now we think they're rather neat; the men are brave, the women sweet and we are thrilled to see the way they give the Nazis battle.

Their lines are stretched from Zoonak to Philtz, which doesn't worry them a bit, they fight in moon or burning sun... as Kipling might have said it... not asking where they go, or why, they take their places, fight and die, then others come to carry on and do not seem to dread it.

But, as we started out to say, we never thought we'd want to pray for victories to bless the efforts of the heathen races, thus bringing forcibly to mind some things we learned and left behind; time changes things, and circumstances always alter cases.

I'll Take Lamb Chops

Sports department reports arrival in our fair city of venison—deer meat—distributed among friends by successful hunters. I'll take a couple of pounds of lamb chops, thank you.

In has been several years since a hunting friend joined a party in the Georgia swamps and returned to bestow upon me a slab, or hunk, of venison. He claimed to have shot the buck of which this was a souvenir, but I have my doubts. I doubt that anybody shot it. I think it was rounded up in a corral and executed by dynamite.

I have often wondered, too, what method was used in severing my fragment of deer from the carcass as a whole. Perhaps a hack saw, such as prisoners use in cutting through steel cells, had been taken along.

I bore this trophy of my friend's prowess home and the family—there was more of a family at home then than now—prepared to make merry. The mistress of the Manor dug up ancient recipes for preparing a "haunch of venison" and set to work.

I don't know just what she, the gas stove and the kitchen maid did to that succulent gob but I don't think bad cooking was the fault. She and I have often wished, for the sake of science, that she had cooked, side by side with the venison, a quarter-section of an automobile tire and a large fragment of that cast iron grate which had been busted the week before. A comparison of their tenderness would have made a valuable contribution to Sally Saver's food column.

Page Gargantua

It looked good when served. I'll

Our New Allies—As Described by Mr. O. Reeves

concede that. But no man since William the Conqueror and his Normans can grasp a 10-pound roast and tear it asunder with his teeth. Gargantua, my gorilla pal who is with us at the circus, might do it. But he'd have to send for a dentist afterwards.

A carving knife proved an inefficient utensil. I'd as soon have attempted to slice a grindstone. But finally a fragment of the delicacy reached everybody's plate. Then ensued another contest between steel and venison. The venison won. Indeed, one of the boys insisted he'd bent his fork trying to penetrate the gravy.

The Mistress of the Manor does not believe in waste. That venison was going to be eaten—in some form—or we'd starve. Said she: She parboiled it again, I think. She baked it. I heard a rumor it had busted the meat grinder.

After a few days it disappeared from the menu. We had a steak. A cow steak.

But nobody dared to ask what ever became of that venison. We were afraid to bring up the subject.

Problem Solved

Story about a fellow in Saturday's football throng, trying to get out of a hotel through a revolving door and repeatedly found himself back in the lobby.

He couldn't beat the game, no matter how often he tried. He was standing there, mopping his brow, when a young man went out of the door with apparent ease while a young woman came in, leaving the door spinning.

The subject of this narrative leaned up against a pillar and concentrated. And finally solved the problem.

"Magicians!" he said. And went back to a lounge.

Charter Delivered To Cordele Elks

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. CORDELE, Ga., Nov. 5.—The

Cordele lodge of Elks, No. 1,647, with 69 charter members, was instituted Tuesday night at impressive ceremonies in the Woman's Memorial Club auditorium.

Special Deputy Grand Exalted Ruler Roderick M. McDuffie, of East Point, presided at the induction services in the place of the grand exalted ruler, Judge John S. McClelland, scheduled to officiate, who was unable to be present.

J. F. Burke, Cordele businessman, was named to serve the Cordele club as exalted ruler; Jack Williams was selected treasurer, and Sam Roobin, secretary. Other officers of the local organization were: Joe Cannon, leading knight; C. S. Worthing, loyal knight; Holt Walton, lecturing knight; Earl McKenzie, tyler; J. W. Dennard, Jake Sheppard and George Williams, trustees.

Approximately 125 were present at the induction. A buffet supper was served following the evening's program.

A record ocean flight for land planes was set when 21 heavy bombers flew from California to Hawaii, more than 2,000 miles over water.

By GEORGE B. ANDERSON.

A serious and extremely efficient young lady who is planning to get married this winter started shopping for furniture last week, armed with a lot of information on furniture construction. Assuming that two manufacturers put equal amounts of wood and fabric of equal quality into their furniture, she explained to me, it would be most foolish to pay one manufacturer more for his product than the other was asking.

"The trick," she explained confidently, "is to discover the bargains."

She came home night before last, bubbling with enthusiasm over the purchase of a kitchen table, for which she'd paid about 10 percent above the average price.

I pointed out to her that kitchen tables have been rather standardized over a period of years, and said I couldn't see why she'd paid more for the price for which she could have bought any one of several others.

"Because it's so gay," she explained. "The color and the decorative design are exactly what I want."

The manufacturer had invested in design and color, realizing that his investment would mean he'd have to get more money for his product—but knowing, too, that people don't buy merchandise simply because it answers certain specifications. They buy because it's "exactly what they want."

Some quarters have accused advertisers of adding frills to merchandise and thus increasing prices. Goods are made to sell, and you make the decision of Mr. Newton, of Adairsville, and Mr. Simpson, of Rome, Ga.

From the few excerpts given from the books required to be taught in school, surely endorse the stand taken by Mr. Talmadge.

The Pulse of the Public

The Constitution invites expression of opinion by its readers. This column is open for that purpose. All communications must be signed and all are subject to editing for conservation of space. Brevity makes argument effective and impels attention.

SONG EXPRESSES VIEW OF BOYS IN OUR ARMY

Editor, Constitution: I have kept up with the strong editorials appearing in The Constitution about the great defense program. I have especially enjoyed reading them because they have expressed the attitude of every loyal American citizen who has enjoyed being a part of this great American democracy.

I am sending you a copy of "Dear Old Uncle Sam" that you might know the attitude of thousands of boys who have put their names on the dotted line. They stand ready and willing to give the best they have to defend this dear old land of ours against Hitlerism and all other isms that would seek to destroy it. The song expresses the sentiments of those boys who agree most heartily with the editorials of The Constitution on defense. May heaven grant that The Constitution will continue to serve the people as it has done for these many years.

C. PARHAM JOHNSON.

DEAR OLD UNCLE SAM.

I've put my name on the dotted line.

To fight for Uncle Sam, I'll give the best in this soul of mine.

To show just where I am, Uncle Sam, I'll fight to save Old Glory, I'll go across the sea.

The only thing that I may ask is the good flag for a shield I'll fight like a valiant soldier up on the battle field.

SUPPORTS TALMADGE VIEW ON EDUCATION

Editor, Constitution: I am urged to commend the letters of Mr. Newton, of Adairsville, and Mr. Simpson, of Rome, Ga.

From the few excerpts given from the books required to be taught in school, surely endorse the stand taken by Mr. Talmadge.

F. D. POLLOCK.

"He who would grow roses in his garden must first grow them in his heart."

Whether he was quoting from someone else, I cannot say, but the above sentence seemed to me a very fitting text for all that Dr. F. D. Pollock said in his remarkable address last Monday morning to the Baptist ministers of Atlanta. He was speaking on the life and work of the late Dr. P. D. Pollock, and the sentence I have quoted was one of the many eloquent ones in Dr. Ragsdale's address.

"From plowboy to college president," may be suggested as the opening thought in Dr. Ragsdale's address. Dr. Pollock was born in Houston county, in 1860. His father moved to Floyd county when Dr. Pollock was still a lad. He worked on the farm and attended the common school in the neighborhood. He was fortunate to be under the brilliant young teacher, A. A. Marshall, a direct descendant of Daniel Marshall, the first Baptist preacher, so far as we know, to come into Georgia, back in 1772. Dr. Pollock had one year at Mercer, 1879-80, and then had to leave college for financial reasons and teach school. In 1883-1884 he took the one-year course in law at the University of Georgia, going from the University to Senoia, where he was superintendent of schools. Following that splendid service, he went abroad for two years, studying in France and Germany, after which he returned to Newman as superintendent of schools for two years. In 1893 he went to Mercer University.

sity as Professor of English, and in 1895 was elected president, serving with great distinction until his untimely death in 1905.

Dr. Pollock was the first layman to serve as president of Mercer. His rare ability in dealing with all the tasks of the institution was quickly recognized, not only by the Baptists of Georgia, but the entire educational community. He doubled the endowment, expanded the curriculum, drew additional outstanding personalities into the faculty, attracted choice young men into the student body, gave distinctive accent to the ministry of the Christian College, and inspired the entire state to a deeper commitment to the ideal of making this a better world in which to live.

He had grown roses in his heart, and could, therefore, grow roses in his garden. He had followed the gleam from the furrows of Floyd county to the whitening fields of a yet more glorious harvest in cultivating Christian character in the college in which he had been called as teacher and president.

A thrilling story, you will agree; and we do well, I am persuaded, to pause now and then, even as Dr. Ragsdale led us to do last Monday, and review the lives of the great men and women who have gone before us.

John Thomas King Sr. Dies at Milledgeville

Eight-Day Art Exhibit Opens Here Sunday

Paintings of Benedict and Booraem To Be Shown.

Artists Milner Benedict and Hendrick Booraem will exhibit their works, including portraits of several prominent Atlantans and 10 landscape paintings for eight days, beginning Sunday, at the Biltmore Sunday, it was announced yesterday.

Benedict will show a group of oil and pastel portraits. His oil works include portraits of Philip Anne Eguen, Miss Helen Stiles H. Alston, Wiley P. Ballard, Miss Young and Miss Eleanor Sterer, of the Metropolitan Opera. He also has painted such people as Mrs. Oliver de Gray Vanderbilt III, Miss Peggy French, of Hollywood, and Countess Lolita de Llorca.

Booraem, who will show 10 water color landscapes, has devoted most of his time to painting nature scenes. He particularly likes Georgia scenes and one of his works, entitled "North Georgia Landscapes," is now hanging in the annual exhibition of the Allied Artists of America in the Fine Arts galleries in New York.

TANKS FIGHT FIRE.

BARRIE, Ont., Nov. 5.—(P)—Twenty-ton tanks were used to level wooden buildings in the path of a fire at Camp Borden Military hospital today when half a dozen of the 15 one-story buildings were burned. All patients of the 600-bed hospital were evacuated safely.

COTTON DAMAGE. ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 5.—One hundred and forty-four bales of government-owned cotton stored in a local warehouse were damaged by fire here Sunday, fire Chief W. C. Thompson said. None of the bales was completely burned, though all were damaged, the chief said. The fire had been burning for some time before the firemen received the call.

AN IMPORTANT NOTICE to Dial Telephone Users

Many Atlanta telephone users are dialing "operator" and asking her to dial their numbers for them instead of dialing the numbers themselves. They would get faster service by dialing the numbers direct.

"Operator" assistance service is maintained to help telephone users who must have assistance in completing their calls. This includes emergencies and aid to blind or otherwise incapacitated persons. Calls of this nature alone keep our assistance operators busy. So whenever anyone unnecessarily dials "operator" and asks her to dial a number, he not only slows up his own service but also that of the persons for whom operator assistance service was designed.

Quicker and more efficient service for all will result if telephone subscribers will dial their numbers themselves and encourage other users of their telephones to do likewise.

Four New Pictures To Open Engagements in City Today

Stage Show To Begin Three-Day Run at Capitol Tomorrow; Maria Montez Will Appear in Person at Paramount Next Week.

By DUDLEY GLASS. Four new pictures start in Atlanta theaters today, with the Capitol opening a stage show tomorrow, coupled with "Buy Me That Town."

"The Feminine Touch" is the Grand feature. "A Yank in the R.A.F." is at the Fox. The Rialto presents "Three Girls About Town." "In New York Town" starts today at the Roxy.

Several song numbers—"Hi-Ya

Love" and "Another Little Dream Won't Do Us Any Harm"—were written for Miss Grable for the night club sequences by the song-hit team of Leo Robin and Ralph Rainer. However, her part, as the dancer, pursued by an entire combat unit of the R.A.F., calls largely for straight comedy and drama.

"Feminine Touch." Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche and Kay Francis form the trio who play leading roles in "The Feminine Touch," starting today at Loe's Grand.

You'd naturally guess it's about two girls and one man—with that cast. And you'd be right. Jealousy is the principal theme, with Ameche the handsome chap in the middle of trouble.

Miss Russell, I am informed, is the wife of Ameche's brother, the actor, Miss Francis makes passes at him. And who could do it more effectively? Mrs. Ameche can stand just so much and no more. Then she starts pulling hair and throwing things.

Van Heflin and Donald Meek also are featured.

"Three Girls" at Rialto. Joan Blondell, Binnie Barnes and Janet Blair enact the roles of three sisters, hostesses in a convention hotel, in "Three Girls About Town," the new romantic comedy which starts a week's engagement at the Rialto today.

It is the story of three sisters and a newspaper reporter who is in love with one of them. The reporter, played by John Howard, doesn't mind somewhat nefarious means in his efforts to induce the gal to marry him.

Then there is Wilberforce Puddie, the hotel manager, played by Robert Benchley, funnier than ever. There are Una O'Connor, Eric Blore and Dorothy Vaughan to add to the fun and excitement. A convention hotel is a natural setting for giddy comedy. The situations in this picture are filled with wacky delegates, leftovers from conventions held at the hotel by magicians, morticians and all sorts of groups.

In addition to this feature, the Rialto is offering a special short subject, an "International Forum" release, dealing with the question of whether or not Allied forces can defeat the Nazis with the aid of American ships and other war material.

"In New York Town." Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin and Robert Preston are teamed in "In New York Town," starting today at the Roxy.

It is a story about New Yorkers—and not the Park avenue set nor cafe society. Just folks. MacMurray is one of those sidewalk photographers who shoot you with a candid camera, slip you a card and hope you'll order some prints.

Mary is a small-town girl, half-starved when Fred rescues her—the beginning of the usual beautiful romance. The cast looks exceptionally capable. It includes Akim Tamiroff, Lynne Overman and Eric Blore.

On Stage at Capitol. The Capitol theater has found another stage treat in "Powder and Lipstick," a revue which will play a three-day engagement starting Friday, together with "Buy Me That Town," starring Lloyd Nolan, Constance Moore and Albert Dekker, on the screen.

This newest stage revue is owned by the vaudeville family. The Arnauts, and four brothers and a sister of that family appear in the unit presenting "A Bird Fantasy."

Vaudeville acts will dominate this new Capitol stage show and, in addition to the Arnauts, there will be presented Mary Clifford, brilliant singing star; Dick Leslie, the voice of the Merry Melody cartoons; Dawn and Russell, outstanding dancing team; the Volga Boatman, a unique surprise; and the Twelve Daughters of Eve, talented dancing line. Music is to be furnished by a 15-piece stage band.

"Buy Me That Town" is said to be an especially outstanding picture. Today for the last times the Capitol offers "The Cowboy and the Blonde," starring Mary Beth Hughes and Alan Mowbray.

Turns to Soybeans. Iowa, the No. 1 hog and corn state, is running into competition from Iowa the No. 2 soybean state. Hog men concede that soybean oil is "permanently in the picture" as a major competitor of lard in the frying pans and ovens of America.

Lunt, Fontanne To Open 3-Day Stand Tonight Atlanta Man To Appear On 'Hobby Lobby'

'There Shall Be No Night' One of Most Praised Plays of Day. Will Tell Coast-to-Coast Audience Story of Building Hospital.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne will inaugurate the current theatrical season at 8:30 o'clock tonight by beginning a three-day engagement in Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer prize play, "There Shall Be No Night," at the Erlanger theater.

Inspired by a broadcast heard from the front line trenches of Finland on Christmas Day, 1939, "There Shall Be No Night" is a powerful protest against the over-running and destruction of small nations by their stronger neighbors. It has been one of the most discussed and most praised plays of this generation and also one of the most successful.

The cast that supported Lunt and Miss Fontanne in the first performance of "There Shall Be No Night" at Providence, R. I., on March 29, 1941, is still virtually intact and includes Sydney Greenstreet, Maurice Colbourne, Thomas Gomez, Elizabeth Fraser, Montgomery Clift, Edward G. Robinson, William Le Massena and Charve Chester. There will be a matinee Saturday.

Catherine Small Is Poster Winner. A poster by Catherine Small illustrating a child and an adult dreaming of books they have read and enjoyed yesterday was judged best poster in the book week poster contest held at Sacred Heart High school. Catherine is editor of the school annual.

Runners-up was Virginia Smith, who turned in a poster entitled "Silent Companions." Her poster pictured a little girl and boy reading children's books. The posters were judged by a staff of three judges and the student body.

Hoppers Whoppers. There are many stories about prairie grasshoppers, but the ones being told in Camp Sarcee, Alta., these days tell them all. Soldiers tell of being kicked out of bed by big 'hoppers looking for a place to sleep.

Legion Officials Urge Aid of Posts in Defense. INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The annual conference of department commanders and adjutants of the American Legion recommended today at its closing session an extensive program of participation in national defense by the organization's 11,700 posts throughout the United States.

Principal point in the plan was the suggestion that Legion leaders obtain from governors and state defense councils authority to supervise the aircraft warning service and to mobilize and train air raid wardens.

Blanket 10 Per Cent Pay Boost To Be Sought for City Workers

Forebodings of a 1942 council battle over finances were seen yesterday when Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, joined by three other antiadministration members of council known as the "Big Four," announced he will seek a blanket 10 per cent pay increase for municipal employees, effective in January, and at the same time he will ask that a special one mill tax for improvements not be levied.

A resolution by White is now pending before the finance committee calling for expenditure of approximately $45,000 next year to institute a system of automatic pay increases to take salary increments out of the council grab bag and provide for raises for all classification brackets on a merit basis.

White said he will urge approval of his measure and propose several adjustments for those in the extreme lower brackets, but that no blanket 10 per cent hike could be made if the city's sound financial standing is to be preserved.

Gilliam was joined by Aldermen Frank Reynolds and Councilmen Frank Wilson and J. Allen Couch in his resolutions.

Pointing out that a blanket 10 per cent increase would amount to about $415,000 for next year, and that the city already has added $254,000 to payrolls for higher salaries and new personnel in the past two years, Councilman John A. White, chairman of the finance committee, said the allocation sought would endanger the sound fiscal policies of the city government.

He added that those favoring such a plan as that proposed would be forced to bring into council a supplementary financing program if any public improvements are to be made, and if worn-out city equipment is to be replaced.

Gilliam pointed out that the cost of living has advanced appreciably within the past few months and employees are suffering. He also said in connection with the move to suspend the one-mill levy for improvements that demands for national defense will make it impossible for the city to engage in any substantial program of capital improvements.

"Continuation of the levy," he said, is a burden on the taxpayers in view of the fact that funds raised thereby during the period of national emergency can not be applied to capital improvements through inability of the city to procure the necessary materials.

He said the city's fiscal condition justifies the 10 per cent increase adding "that is the only fair way to do it."

Caraway Asks That Neutrality Act Be Revised

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—The senate's only woman member, Hattie W. Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, the mother of two sons in uniform, urged revision of the neutrality act and the arming of American merchant ships today with an assertion that it was "a strange theory that our boys can be shot at without any means of defense."

She spoke at the close of a day which saw Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, a leader of the opposition to administration foreign policies, denounce President Roosevelt for not invoking the neutrality act in connection with the Russo-German war. The President has administered the act, he said, in a way that permitted him to "play power politics" all over the world and virtually intervene in foreign wars.

Close to Voting Phase.

The day's speaking brought the senate's consideration of the legislation—repealing the present bans on arming American ships and sending them into belligerent waters—close to the voting phase.

One more day of debate, leaders hoped, would conclude the set speech phase of the debate.

Mrs. Caraway based her support for the legislation upon an argument that the passage of the law in the first place involved an "abject surrender" of America's right to the freedom of the seas, that the law was "a super-appeal" and that it actually had invited attack upon American shipping.

"American ships have been attacked and will continue to be attacked regardless of the ocean or zone upon which they travel," she said. "To say that American men shall be sent to sea and placed at the mercy and whim of a soulless opponent and given no means with which to protect themselves is incomprehensible."

Concerned Over Issue.

"The blood of every American seaman so assassinated will cry out with vengeance upon those who seek to make this possible."

"Events over which we have no control dominate our present situation. After all, it is not so much a question of whether we will be drawn into the war; it is rather one of whether the war will come to us."

"I feel deeply in this matter. I have two sons wearing the uniform of this country. I am sure this is true of other members of the senate. I have voted for the other preparedness measures with full knowledge of the responsibility which I assumed."

"I cast these votes believing it to be to the best interests of not only my sons, but those of the other fathers and mothers of America. Believing it to be right to see no other way except to cast my vote for the pending measure. That I intend to do."

Smith Opposition.

During the day, Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, dean of the senate, announced he would oppose the legislation. "If we are going to declare war, let's declare war," he told reporters. "Let's not be sliding and sneaking in through the back door."

During the day a White House conference, attended by Mr. Roosevelt's lieutenants in the senate, concluded that it would be best to keep the legislation clear of such amendments as proposals for combating strikes in defense industries.

At a press conference, Secretary of the Navy Knox said that arming ships was one way to reduce losses from submarine attacks. Submarines "have no love for ships with guns on their decks," he added.

Although the senate has paid only the most casual attention to the formal debate on the neutrality law revision question—often not more than a half-dozen senators have been present—an incident today showed that the issue is cutting deeply.

In the course of Wheeler's speech, Senator Lee, Democrat, Oklahoma, interrupted to shout that the Montanan was "making the same argument that was made by Quisling" and other leaders in small European countries since overrun by the Nazis.

But the Russians had also prepared for war for 20 years and were not inferior to the Germans in man power or in bulk of material. Russia had no fifth columns. The Russian soldiers fight and die as well as any on earth, and Russia was preparing for a total war when I was in Russia in 1927.

Where the Russians have proved themselves inferior is in officer leadership and organization. That is partly Russian and even more the fault of the Communist system, which has succeeded in decapitating the best brains of the army and removing all individual initiative.

In a war of movement on many fronts this is an indispensable asset and the Germans have it, perhaps because the army resisted Nazi interference better than any other institution in the country.

To attempt to defeat the German armies is to consider building a force of eight to 10 million with positive air and mechanical superiority and to build it before the Germans strike again on a ground where they have the advantage of an interior position. It is to plan to attack Germany, not in her weakest spot, but in her strongest.

Her strongest spot is the German army.

THE DAUGHTERS OF EVE—These dancing girls, billed as the "Daughters of Eve," will be featured in the stage show, "Powder and Lipstick," opening tomorrow at the Capitol theater. A screen show also plays.

British, U. S. Foreign Policy Needs Clarity

They have lost probably a million to date in Russia alone. But they are still able to call upon a trained army of six million, plus Bulgarians, Hungarians, Rumanians, Slovaks, and the armament plants in the whole of Europe. Oil is apparently—according to all the experts—a weak point. But suppose they get the Caucasian fields? Oil fields cannot be destroyed, I am told. They can be put out of commission, but if the Germans continue to exercise their present efficiency, they will be fully restored in one to two years' time.

Where is there the army in size and equipment that can face them of decisive victory?

Unless there are military secrets to which we are not privy, the answer is—nowhere.

Not Military People.

The British are not a military people, and heaven knows we are not. The Anglo-Saxon world is trying to scramble together in two or three years' time an army adequate to face the Germans, who have spent 20 years building the greatest machine on earth.

It is nonsense to speak of the German army as a creation of Hitler. The German army is a creation of the German people and of the Treaty of Versailles. The provisions of that treaty limited the German forces to 100,000 men, and attempted to prevent Germany from building trained reserves by requiring a 12 years' enlistment.

The result was that 100,000 officers were trained and the system of highly mobile and mechanized troops perfected in every detail of planning long before Hitler became chancellor. He simply gave that army the green light and forty billion dollars to work with for seven years before he started the war. And forty billions didn't mean forty billions in our terms because he didn't pay for planes and guns what this country pays—not by a long shot.

First Great Test.

The superiority of this army has had its first great test in Russia. France was a pushover for so many reasons, including intrigue, treason, corruption and fifth columns, that it was really no test. The French collapse was as much a political defeat as a military one.

But the Russians had also prepared for war for 20 years and were not inferior to the Germans in man power or in bulk of material. Russia had no fifth columns. The Russian soldiers fight and die as well as any on earth, and Russia was preparing for a total war when I was in Russia in 1927.

Where the Russians have proved themselves inferior is in officer leadership and organization. That is partly Russian and even more the fault of the Communist system, which has succeeded in decapitating the best brains of the army and removing all individual initiative.

STREAMLINER VS. OLD IRONSIDES—Modern misses in the foundations of 1941 don't know what Mama had to go through with back in the old days of the whalebone stay. At left is the modern silhouette, as demonstrated yesterday in a "corset school" at the Biltmore. And at right the old model, that felt like a suit of armor, and looks as bad, until the medical profession campaigned against it as a menace to health.

Corset Fitters Hear Details On Figure Fancies of Duchess

The Duchess of Windsor enhances her glamorous figure in a nylon stay-up-top panty girdle, size 24. She prefers them in pink or white, and orders them six at a time from a New York department store. In her London days she wore what is known to the trade as "old Y-44," an all youth-lastic 14-inch steppin with lacing on each side at the waist.

These facts were brought out yesterday at the Biltmore hotel where Mrs. Virginia Hall Wellwood, director of education for Warner Brothers Company, of Bridgeport, Conn., the world's largest corset manufacturing firm, conducted a school in corset-fitting for a group of young women employed in the corset departments of stores throughout the south.

History of Corset.

Part of Mrs. Wellwood's afternoon lecture yesterday dealt with the history of the corset, from the turn of the century to the present day. Among the exhibits were the old ironclads of the early 1900's, with the steel staves and the multitudinous laces which made mama look, and feel, as if she had trussed herself up in something Sir Launcelot might have worn.

In those brave old days Mrs. Wellwood pointed out, mama went down to the corset counter and asked for her new corset by size.

She never was fitted. That wouldn't have been modest. And she wouldn't have been found dead in a pink corset. That would have been daring to the verge of indecency. Then she trundled home carrying a long box and everybody she passed on the street knew she had a new corset.

The next problem was getting into the thing. This generally called for the help of papa or a bedpost. One of the greatest burdens on marriages around the turn of the century was papa's task of lacing up mama. He generally raised such a fuss about it mama didn't loosen her laces any more. She just unfastened the clasps in front. Which meant she couldn't get it on again without sliding it up, which wasn't comfortable, so she could bring it back and fuss at the salesgirl for selling her the wrong size.

Demonstrating each development in feminine armorplate as changing styles brought them out slowly, Mrs. Wellwood then talked of the rustless corset stave, and the first great innovation when Warner Brothers had the audacity to attach garter to the corset, doing away with the old ribbons that tied around the waist.

Physicians Enter Scene. The next great forward step came when the physicians banded together in condemnation of the lace-back corset, which squeezed too tight, and the result was the clasp front wrap-around job which came along in the early 20's. It didn't do much good from the health standpoint, though.

Then came the sidehook wrap-around, which came along with the boyish form, and with it the equally unhealthy fat-chested figure of the day, about as curvilinear as a piece of plank.

But things rocked along and the yen for curves came back about the time that latex was first tried as a corset material, along in the early 1930's. Since then progress has been rapid, and the modern corset, boned, smooth, and streamlined, came into being, all in one piece, and, as Mrs. Wellwood, who molds 230 pounds into one of them very successfully, says, "very, very neat."

Bill Edens Is Presented With Gold Police Badge

Policing activities of Bill Edens, Mayor LeCraw's executive secretary, will be of the refined type in the future to live up to the petite, flashing gold police badge given him yesterday by Councilman Howard Haire, member of city council's police committee.

Several days ago Edens' first police job was running down a hit-and-run automobile driver, and he received considerable notoriety for his success. Yesterday Haire appeared at the mayor's office with the new badge. "I'll have to limit my work to better jobs done with more finesse in the future," Edens said as it was pinned on him. "No more street brawls with violators for me."

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 5.—(AP)—A former president of the Basque republic, Jose Antonio de Aguirre, said here he was "positive of the triumph of the Allies in the end."

"The present regime of Spain necessarily has to be with the Axis powers," he said, "but I believe 80 or more per cent of the Spanish people are with the Allies in heart."

Uncle Sam needs plumbers. Twelve skilled workers in addition to the 250 Georgia plumbers who sailed for the canal zone yesterday are needed by the fourth zone quartermaster, officials announced here last night.

Pay is $1.44 an hour with time and a half for overtime and work on Sunday. Applicants should apply to the Georgia Employment Service, 191 Marietta street.

MAKE YOUR FELLOW JOIN THE ARMY, GIRLS

Here's a tip for girls who can't get a timid suitor to pop the question. Encourage him to join the Army.

The public relations office at Fort Jackson has compiled a report which indicates "that six months of Army life will spur the most reticent swain to an immediate expression of his desire for marital bliss rather than martial bliss."

It isn't, concludes the p. r. office, that the boys dislike the strictly military side of their Army life. It's simply the matter of sewing on buttons, washing clothes, making beds and doing K. P. that opens their eyes to the joys of living in a snug little nest with the "one and only" in constant attendance to keep the place properly polished.

MOTOR MAINTENANCE UNITS PLANNED.

To standardize the "Keep 'Em Rolling" program of the Quartermaster Corps, the Eighth Corps Area will set up motor maintenance units, simulating the units first established by Brigadier General James L. ## 1,000 Sweaters, Kits Are Asked Of Red Cross

Aid Is for Men on Duty in North Atlantic.

An emergency call for 1,000 sweaters and 1,000 Christmas ditty kits for American men on duty in the North Atlantic has been received by the Atlanta Red Cross chapter.

These sweaters and kits must be at the shipping point by November 25 and the Atlanta chapter sent yesterday a hurry call for volunteer knitters to help in completing these sweaters and kits.

The Atlanta chapter is asking women to help in meeting this emergency request for warm sweaters and Christmas bags. Wool will be supplied at headquarters at 848 Peachtree street. The telephone number is Vernon 4751.

here to confer with General Frink, Colonel C. E. Richmond, motor transport officer on General Frink's staff, and Colonel Richard N. Atwell, commandant of the motor transport school at Fort McPherson, said the wartime economy in repair and reclamation of Army motor vehicles here is considered the most feasible plan for overhauling damaged and worn-out vehicles and for reclamation of serviceable parts.

Officers who participated in the Second and Third Army maneuvers in the Carolinas will attend an officers' motor transport school, to be held at Fort McPherson, General Frink announced yesterday. They will study the difficulties of second echelon maintenance encountered on the maneuvers and will standardize "Keep 'Em Rolling" methods.

1,200 NEW TROOPS ARRIVE AT WHEELER

Two Nazi U-Boats Attacked Near U. S. Base on Newfoundland

Submarines Skulk in Sight Of Coast Line

Sub Believed Sunk by Fire of Canadian Corvette.

TORONTO, Nov. 5.—(P)—German submarines are operating within sight of the Newfoundland coast, Navy Minister Angus MacDonald "clarified today, two having been attacked and one possibly sunk last month by a Canadian corvette and a Coastal Command plane in the Belle Isle channel.

This channel, at the mouth of the strait between Newfoundland and Labrador opposite the northern tip of Newfoundland, is about 400 miles by air north of the United States defense base on Newfoundland.

"There are many submarines now between Belle Isle and Iceland and there are others along the southern convoy route," said MacDonald at the dedication of a new corvette, the Oakville.

U-boats also lie off Dakar, French West Africa, and "nearly always attack a convoy passing there, and they can generally get a ship," he added.

MacDonald's statement followed his assertion before the house of commons last night that "more than one U-boat had been sunk by Canadian ships and disclosure that Canada is building operational airdromes in Newfoundland and Labrador on the Atlantic and British Columbia on the Pacific."

Rear Admiral Percy Nelles, naval chief of staff, stood by and approved MacDonald's statement.

No Surprise.

In Halifax, Nova Scotia, focal point of Canadian naval activities, the news occasioned no surprise. It was recalled that a group of survivors reaching Halifax several weeks ago were understood to have been from a ship torpedoed near Newfoundland.

It was recalled, too, that during the World War German submarines were several times operated within 25 or 30 miles of Halifax itself. Many persons at that time claimed to have seen them from shore.

Unofficial reports in New York said Canadian planes based at St. John's, Newfoundland, already had sunk several submarines, and marine observers said the Germans had been coming steadily closer to the American continent as German-American relations became worse.

Blackout Probe Appears Certain

A congressional investigation of the OPM-ordered southeastern blackout of nonessential services appeared certain yesterday.

At the same time, Major John Damon, OPM power branch enforcement officer, reported "almost complete" compliance with the blackout order in the seven states affected.

In Washington, Chairman Hart, Democrat, New Jersey, of the merchant marine subcommittee, said it seemed advisable to inquire into the situation which caused the Federal Power Commission to order curtailment of electricity usage in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, eastern Mississippi and northern Florida.

The other congressional election of Tuesday, in the second Mississippi district, went to Jamie L. Whitten, Democrat.

The only result remotely resembling an upset was the record-smashing victory of Frank John Lausche in the Cleveland mayoralty fight. Lausche defeated the Republican incumbent, Edward Blythin, by some 50,000 ballots.

Ball Player Elected.

The comeback campaign of former Mayor James M. Curley in Boston was wrecked by Mayor Maurice J. Tobin, who won reelection in a four-way nonpartisan race with 126,002 votes, the most ever polled by a mayor there.

In Detroit, where Mayor Edward J. Jeffries was re-elected in a nonpartisan contest, Billy Rogell, the former Detroit Tiger shortstop, won a seat on the city council which already included Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, University of Detroit football coach.

Incumbent mayors in the four largest Connecticut cities, including Socialist Jasper McLevy, of Bridgeport, were re-elected. The Democrats took another four-year lease on the Albany, N. Y., city hall with the election of 32-year-old Erastus Corning II, as mayor.

And in Yatesville, Pa. (population 800) four women won against their husbands for town offices went back to their kitchens defeated, but said they might try again in 1943.

Congress to Remain in Session Pending Truce in Jap Crisis

Special Envoy Flying From Orient To Seek Understanding.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(P)—Administration leaders have decided to hold congress in session indefinitely because of the crisis in Japanese-American relations, informed sources said today.

The decision came as a surprise, inasmuch as some house leaders had talked previously of knocking off legislative work for the balance of the year, as soon as which neutrality and price control measures were out of the way.

Saburo Kurusu, the Japanese diplomat who signed the Axis alliance for Japan, was en route by plane to the United States in what was described as a urgent effort to ease the dangerous situation in the Pacific. It was implied, however, that however conciliatory his avowed intentions, Japan was going to make demands, at least as trading points, of an almost incredible sweeping nature which would involve nothing less than complete American capitulation in the western Pacific.

Influential Democratic senators, who asked that their names be withheld, said that under present plans there would be nothing more than three-day recesses for either the senate or house in the near future.

Some legislators described the situation as "very serious" and indicated they thought it was showing no sign of improvement.

U. S. Off-Year Balloting Runs True to Form

Parties Still Have Leads in Traditional Strongholds.

By The Associated Press.

Results of the off-year elections, headed by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's return to office in New York, showed last night that the voting generally ran just about true to form.

The final returns showed 1,186,394 votes for LaGuardia, 1,052,553 for O'Dwyer, and 21,402 for George W. Hartmann, Socialist.

The New Jersey legislature remained Republican despite the state-wide stumping campaign by Governor Charles Edison in behalf of Democratic candidates. In fact, the Democrats lost one seat in the state senate, giving the G. O. P. control by 17 to 4, and at least three of their 19 seats in the 60-place assembly.

Republicans Lead.

Republicans captured the two state-wide judiciary posts at stake in Pennsylvania and claimed a major share of the local offices. The special congressional election in the 15th Pennsylvania district, traditionally Republican, went to Wilson D. Gillette, of the G. O. P., over George D. Wagner, Democrat.

The other congressional election of Tuesday, in the second Mississippi district, went to Jamie L. Whitten, Democrat.

The only result remotely resembling an upset was the record-smashing victory of Frank John Lausche in the Cleveland mayoralty fight. Lausche defeated the Republican incumbent, Edward Blythin, by some 50,000 ballots.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 5.—(INS)—Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, declared today that Great Britain would take its stand by the United States in the event of a war provoked by Japan with this country.

"If Japan provokes a war with the United States we should immediately be by the side of the United States—there is no doubt about that."

Nazis Claim New Foothold On Black Sea

Germans Break Through Mountains in Drive on Crimea.

By The Associated Press.

The Germans claimed last night that their central offensive in the Crimea had broken through to the Black sea over the 5,000-foot-high Yaila mountains somewhere between Kerch and Sevastopol, but there was no evidence of progress of consequence for the drives directly upon those major ports.

The available information indicated in fact that on the approaches of both Sevastopol, the main Soviet Black sea naval base, and Kerch, which stands at the northeastern extremity of the peninsula and is separated by only two miles of water from the western Caucasus, the Nazi had come down to a substantial halt.

As much was indicated by Berlin's own accounts and by Soviet reports that these thrusts had materially slackened. The explanation seemed to be that the Nazis had reached the outer fringes of strong defensive systems to which the Russians had been falling back in a retreat which was now ending.

Before both Sevastopol and Kerch, British informants said, the Soviet Marshal Semeon Timoshenko had completed the reorganization of strong and effective forces and was ready now to join major battle.

Nevertheless, the German march over the Yailas would represent an important strategic gain for it would put the invaders in position to take from the rear the Yaila positions, which are among the strongest in the Crimea, and likewise would mean that the Soviet army had been cut into three sections.

meeting that the owners of the property had agreed to take as part payment the tract near the present almshouse on Long Island road bought some time ago as a site for the almshouse. The owners agreed, he said, to allow $5,000 on this tract.

The only opposition to the board's action yesterday was voiced by Charles Henry, a lawyer who said he represented 300 west side voters.

He stated the property the board proposed to buy had been appraised for tax purposes at $1,150 and that real estate men had later put a value of $250 per acre on it. At this point, Chastain interrupted to say that the real estate men had appraised only the rear of the property at that price, which at unofficial as they arrived too late to be audited, swelled the previous total of $382,203 by $97,334, bringing the campaign figure up to $479,537. To this was added the Whitehead Foundation's gift of 10 per cent of the amount publicly subscribed, resulting in a grand total to date of $505,490.

Some Quotas Exceeded.

While several divisions already have exceeded last year's quotas, former givers still unheard from and sources definitely known to be actively rounding up group subscriptions represent an assured means of additional support which confirm earlier forecasts of ultimate success.

The big blackboard at the Ansley meeting registered the following new reports by the various units of campaigners:

Advance gifts No. 1, $15,042; advance gifts No. 2, $5,909; groups division, $47,533; public employees, $16,846; men's central, $1,493; office buildings, $2,245; women's "neighborhood" division, $4,885; Decatur, $1,256; school children, additional, $100; Negro division, $2,025.

There will be no more formal report meetings, it was announced, but all divisions with work still undone will preserve their ranks intact and continue the effort as independent units until all prospects and all territory have been covered completely.

Splendid Work Cited.

Leaders of the women's division were signaled out for special recognition at the final meeting in view of the splendid showing recorded by the feminine workers. Complete standings of all divisions will be announced soon.

Growing evidence of organized labor's support of the appeal was apparent as the following contributions by members of local unions reached headquarters:

Typographical Union, Williams Printing Company, $92; B. of L. F. & E. Seaboard, $38; Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Cluett-Fleabody Company, $121.76; Brotherhood Railway Clerks, No. 354, Southern Railway, $104; Typographical Union, Constitution, $177.75; Typographical Union, Ruralist Press, $19.51; Typographical Union, Foote & Davie, $24; Blacksmiths No. 1, city garage, $14.50; Typographical Union, Journal, $90; American Association of Office Employees, $15; Typographical Union, Gus Russell Typesetters, $10; Machinists' Union, south shops, Southern Railway, $42.10.

Nazis Claim New Foothold On Black Sea

Germans Break Through Mountains in Drive on Crimea.

By The Associated Press.

The Germans claimed last night that their central offensive in the Crimea had broken through to the Black sea over the 5,000-foot-high Yaila mountains somewhere between Kerch and Sevastopol, but there was no evidence of progress of consequence for the drives directly upon those major ports.

The available information indicated in fact that on the approaches of both

Chancellor Sanford Expects Chance To 'Clean House'

By LUKE GREENE.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford predicted yesterday the investigating committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools would advise Georgia what it could do to clean house before the association takes any action affecting the University System.

On the eve of his departure for Chicago to attend a meeting of the National Association of State Universities, the chancellor said it was possible the State Board of Regents might be called into an extraordinary session before its regular meeting December 8 in order to carry out wishes of the investigating group.

Special Session Possible.

Regent Chairman Sandy Beaver, who engineered his committee into pledging that the board would carry out any instructions the investigating body or the full association might offer, has expressed his willingness to call the regents into a special session if it becomes necessary.

The chancellor, when he testified, also pleaded with the committee to tell the regents and University System officials specifically what must be done to save the accrediting rating of the system's 16 units. He said he was confident the requirements would be met, no matter how drastic.

However, during the two-day hearing in Atlanta, the visiting educators strongly hinted that the function of the investigating committee was not to recommend what could be done but to pass on what already had been done.

Cases Not Comparable. Although the record shows the association took drastic action against institutions in Mississippi and Louisiana, Dr. Sanford attempted to prove to the committee that the Georgia case was not comparable.

In rendering its decision in the Mississippi cases, the records show, the association pointed out it was suspending the institutions until such time as the administration should prove it was nonpolitical, and added that neither the statements of the Governor nor the trustees who pledged noninterference in the future had any effect on the final verdict.

The Governor's office reported yesterday he was in Eastman but would probably be back today. During his absence, Chairman Beaver released the statement which his committee made to the investigating group just before it closed the hearing.

Although Chancellor Sanford interpreted the statement as principally an explanation of the Governor's actions regarding the University System, the statement also held the chief executive largely to blame for the present situation. The statement added that the Governor and a majority of the regents recognized they had "run afoul" of the rules, regulations and best practices of the southern association and asked for, in terms outside of probation, suspension or expulsion.

West Georgia College Takes Action in Row

Protest Against 'Political Interference' Is Issued.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

CARROLLTON, Ga., Nov. 5.—West Georgia College students Wednesday joined others in units of the University System of Georgia in a protest against "political interference" with the schools of the state. Two thousand copies of the West Georgian, student newspaper, are being circulated this week to parents of students, to legislators and to citizens of the state of Georgia.

Decision to circulate the protest in a special edition of the student newspaper was reached following a conference in Macon Saturday of students from 10 of the 16 units in the University System.

James Presley, of Chickamauga, is editor of the paper which pleads for a restoration of the independence of the schools.

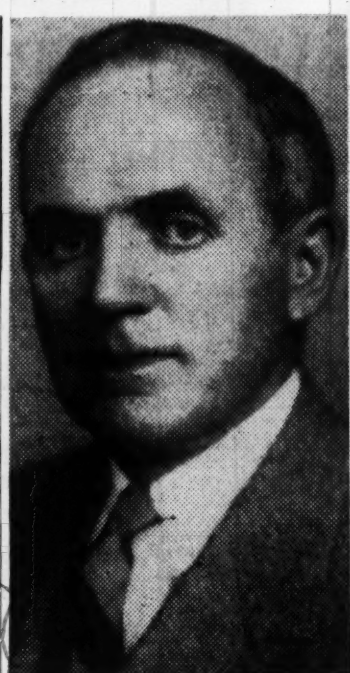

West Georgia College is the largest recipient of Rosenwald Foundation aid in Georgia, an entire three-year program at the college being financed by the foundation.

Economy Is Urged For City's Schools

Atlanta schools must end this year with a $150,000 cash surplus if the 1942 budget carries the same appropriations as the 1941 budget, Thomas W. Clift, school business manager, informed members of the board of education's finance committee yesterday.

Clift said reductions due to a lowering of the wholesale water rates, mandatory next April, and the loss of revenue from a special one-mill tax levy which will not be available next year, will reduce school funds to such a point that every economy must be exercised.

The committee approved and will send to the board at its meeting Tuesday a proposal that the schools contribute $5,000 as the school department's share of sponsors' contribution towards erection of a USO center for Negro service men at Washington High school.

Radio Chief — Neville Miller, Broadcasting Head, Speaks on Aid to Defense.

Assembled for what District President Frank King, of Jacksonville, called a "thoroughgoing discussion for the outlook" of radio, nearly 100 radio executives from Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Puerto Rico will bring to a close their two-day convention here today.

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, was the principal speaker at yesterday's opening session at the Henry Grady hotel.

Pointing to the enormous defense program the radio stations are carrying on, Miller said yesterday radio is doing its part in cementing cordial relations between the United States and South America, principally through short-wave programs of music and culture which offset the effect of Axis propaganda in the Latin Americas.

He was accompanied by Frank E. Pellegrin, youthful director of the association's department of broadcast advertising with headquarters in Washington. John M. Outler Jr., sales manager of station WSB and chairman of sales managers in this district, will conduct a meeting of sales managers today.

Tech Student Council Scores The Governor

'Time for Promises Past,' Letter Declares.

The Georgia Tech Student Council last night made public a letter sent to the Governor in connection with the University System.

The letter told the Governor that "if the University System is discredited, you alone will bear the blame" and declared the "time for promises has passed."

The letter follows: "The Georgia Tech Student Council
"Georgia School of Technology
"Atlanta, Georgia
"November 5, 1941
"The Governor of the State of Georgia
"State Capitol Building
"Atlanta, Georgia
"Dear Governor,
"The Student Council of Georgia Tech, the elected representatives of the Tech student body, has waited patiently until after the investigating committee for the Southern Association gave you, Mr. Governor, and the Board of Regents an opportunity to get the Georgia University System out of the 'quagmire' into which you admit having 'inadvertently' plunged it. You have stated that you 'most heartily concur in every proper and logical safeguard' to protect the educational system from 'any insidious political or other interferences.'

"Mr. Governor, this is hardly the time for concurrence! This is a time for action! We, the students of Tech, are demanding action!"

"While you are not acting, the Southern Association—in order to protect its other members—is going ahead with the only course it can honorably follow; namely, to drop the University System or units of it from their accredited list."

"Last Saturday you instructed the Board of Regents 'without qualifications and reservations' to do what is best for the University System. If you are sincere in this desire, and we believe you are, we, the students of Tech, want to know why you are not taking the initiative. You had the power to precipitate the impending disaster, and you alone have the power to prevent it. Why are you not starting a movement to strip the Governor's office of the power to do with the University System whatever it wills by packing the Board of Regents with 'yes' men?"

"The Southern Association took no action until this power of the Governor's office was revealed. Now we are in a terrible danger, and the association will not be satisfied until you have prevented any future possibility of political poaching on the educational institutions of Georgia."

"The time for promises has passed! 'Nor will promises avail us now!'"

"You, Mr. Governor, because of the power you possess in your executive office, are the only one who can act to prevent this catastrophe to the state you so dearly love."

"Show this power now! 'Use it to the advantage of your state!'"

"If the University System is discredited, you alone will bear the blame—not because you wanted intentionally to ruin our educational system, but because you will be the only one who had the power to make amends—and did not."

"You can make or break the University System of Georgia! 'If you are big enough to divest yourself of domination of the system by placing it on a nonpolitical basis, you may be sure that the people of Georgia will remember you as a man who placed his state's welfare far above any personal gain.'"

"You must act immediately, Mr. Governor—before the Southern Association meets in December. 'We are putting the entire issue squarely up to you. 'May God help you in your choice. 'Sincerely,
"The Georgia Tech Student Council."

Bioff Counsel Says Client 'Is No Extortioner'

Trial of Union Leaders Expected To Go to Jury Today.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—William Bioff, west coast labor leader, was pictured in federal court today as a pawn in some mysterious big money game played by movie magnates as his attorney summed up the case against the theatrical unionist on trial for extortion.

Concluding his four and one-half hours' summation, George M. Breslin told the jury, "I am mystified as to what really happened, but I am convinced as I am sure you are, that Bioff is no extortioner."

Bioff is on trial with George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees (AFL), on charges of extorting $550,000 from the movie industry as the price of labor peace.

The case was expected to go to the jury tomorrow. Arguing that Bioff's alleged victims were willing victims who turned over large sums of money to him with little or no protest, Breslin said that the evidence pointed not to extortion but to a deal arranged by Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, and others.

Bioff testified that he collected more than $1,000,000 from executives of Loew's, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, Warner Brothers, Inc., and the request of Nicholas Schenck, who, he said, told him "the industry is being sandbagged through legislation."

Bioff said he delivered the money to Joseph M. Schenck, then chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox in California.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—A pledge of full support for the administration's foreign policy came today from the senate's newest member, 42-year-old Burnet Rhett Maybank, Democrat, South Carolina, immediately after he had taken the oath of office.

Maybank, who resigned yesterday as governor of his state to complete the remainder of the senate term of James F. Byrnes, now an associate justice of the supreme court, said he was wholeheartedly in favor of the foreign policy of President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Decatur Antique Lovers Visit Mrs. J. W. Evans Today

By SALLY FORTH. THE THRILL of visiting an old southern home will be experienced by members of the Antique Lovers' Club of Decatur today when they motor to the home of a former Atlantan, Mrs. J. W. Evans, in Greensboro. Mrs. Evans has graciously invited the group to meet at her handsome colonial home for luncheon, several of her Greensboro friends to also be numbered among guests.

The home, formerly owned by Mrs. Evans' parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Copelan, of Greensboro, is furnished with a collection of antiques and bric-a-brac destined to delight any connoisseur of beautiful objects. Mrs. Evans' silver service was purchased by her in London, as well as a grandfather clock and several choice Staffordshire figurines. Clocks being her hobby, she owns several, among which is one made in Greensboro a century ago!

Mrs. William Glenn will participate in the program following luncheon, her talk to deal with figurines. Mrs. Harrie Dewis will discuss her collection of rare hands; Mrs. Leon O'Neal will discuss her priceless collection of 100 goblets, and other members will discuss their various collections.

The members of the Antique Lovers' Club are Mesdames Harrie Dewis, M. S. Franks, W. S. Glenn Jr., James Gurren, H. F. Higgins, Roy G. Jones, William Keller, Russell Leonard, L. W. Norris, Paul de Moulipied, Henry Newton, Leon O'Neal and E. H. Tisdale.

The club celebrates its third birthday on Monday at a luncheon to be held in the Owl Room of the Ansley hotel. Reservations should be made with Mrs. Lawrence Everhart before Friday.

Twenty-five boys from the Naval Air Base have signed up for Sunday dinner in town. Have you called Mrs. Wilmer Dutton, Mrs. Ralph McGill, Mrs. Hamilton Loeke, Mrs. Hagood Clarke, Mrs. George McCarty Sr., Mrs. Dan Sage, or Mrs. English Robinson, members of the committee in charge, to make reservations for two or more in your home?

THAT CHARMING versatile band leader, Fred Waring, has been assigned to a new task—that of choosing a beauty contest winner at Duke University!

Twenty photographs of beautiful co-eds from the university have been submitted to him for judging. Only three freshmen were asked to enter pictures, and one of these was Atlanta's own Dottie Grooms, who has created somewhat of a sensation at Duke since her enrollment in September. Dottie, you recall, has won beauty contests practically since she was a babe in arms, so it will be no surprise to her many Atlanta friends to learn that she continues her laurel-winning at Duke.

The Atlanta Chapter of the American Red Cross has received an emergency request for 750 sleeveless Army sweaters and 250 Navy sweaters. These must be ready by November 25. Will you help to knit them? Arriving tomorrow will be Mr. and Mrs. Douglas T. Jeppe, who are en route to their home in Oklahoma City, Okla., from Batesburg, S. C., where they have been visiting relatives. Mrs. Jeppe is the former Alice Watson, of Batesburg, and has a number of Atlanta friends who are looking forward to an enjoyable reunion with the lovely visitor.

Listed among the Jeppe's good friends are Mr. and Mrs. Alan C. Tully, who came to Atlanta for residence several months ago. Both couples formerly made their homes in Melbourne, Australia, where their friendship was firmly established.

Two other attractive visitors will be Mr. and Mrs. Norman Siebenthaler, of Dayton, Ohio, who will arrive Saturday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Tully at their home on Peachtree Battle avenue, and who plan to remain until Tuesday.

From Size 42 to Size 14 Is Result of Bicycling And Counting Calories

By Ida Jean Kain.

There's nothing that makes you want to go on with your diet like hearing about someone else who has finished what you are starting. She is apt to be so delighted with the final outcome that you can't do anything but take heart and get your second wind.

You feel more hopeful when a finished reducer writes that: "In June of 1940, I purchased a bicycle. At that time, I weighed 190 pounds for my height of five feet, two inches. At least, that is what I thought my height was."

"So, determined to lose, I purchased a bicycle and gave up entirely the use of a car or a trolley. When I wanted to go anywhere, I rode my wheel or walked. Concurrently, I made my dietary changes strictly according to the calorie method, and the system of protective food allowance—vitamins, minerals and proteins—garnished from your daily articles."

"But, of course, your readers are mainly interested in results. Over a period of 10 months, I effected considerable changes for the better. My size 42 dress diminished to a 14, with new measurements as follows: bust, 34 inches; waist, 28 inches; hips, 35 inches. At the same time I brought my weight from 190 pounds to 130 pounds—and, oddly enough, discovered that my actual height was five feet three! Perhaps the relief from sagging overweight is the explanation!"

That is one story of weight reduction. Here's another: "I weighed 235 pounds and am now down to 155. But I have the use of an electric bicycle and now, after working for a fool for six weeks, I am only hardened up. I measure the same." And the answer that that is: Fewer calories and more specific exercise. There's no exercise yet invented that can cancel the number it is possible to get in one course of a single meal, or in one between-meal course.

As a final note, someone writes:

"I have been on your diet for five weeks and have lost 21 pounds. I find it easier if I keep track of all meals and the number of calories consumed at each. So I have a small notebook in which these are listed daily. This idea helped me. Perhaps it will help someone else."

How well you make your diet and your exercises depends on you. You may not have to watch your calories so scrupulously, but you may have to watch your calisthenics more than intimated. The while business is up to you.

Your Dietitian,

IDA JEAN KAIN.

If you want to reduce and at the same time to slim down, send for Ida Jean Kain's exercise leaflets, "Twenty-One-Day Diet" and large, stamped return envelope will bring you both. Mail requests to Miss Kain, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Camp Stool Becomes Sewing Stand

The very gift for a friend who knits or sews—an attractive sewing holdall you can easily make from pretty flowery fabric and a campstool. Spread it open—it's a handy little stand. Close it up and it goes anywhere!

To start with, take a campstool without a back, remove canvas and, if the frame's unfinished, stain and wax or paint.

Then, for the bag part, cut a piece of chintz or cretonne 21 by 39 inches and two pieces (side panels) each 11 by 14 inches.

You attach the large piece of fabric to the two side panels. Stitch each long edge along bottom of panel and about eight inches up the sides; make 1 1/4-inch hems across tops of panels.

To fit the bag to the stool, first open stool to about 15 inches and keep firm with string. Run strips of fabric (19 by 3 1/2 inches) through the hems of side panels, pull ends of strips over bars on stool and tack securely. Only thing left to do now is to gather the ends of the bag over the bars, stitch, and add handles of fabric! For other attractive, easily made gifts see our 40-page booklet, "New Ideas for Handmade Gifts." Includes Early American decorated tray, set of fruit-drink coasters, tin smoking set, writing portfolio, pot holders—many gifts you can make from odds and ends.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "NEW IDEAS FOR HANDMADE GIFTS," to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

MY DAY White House Staff Sign Defense Pledge

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK, Tuesday.—Before I left Washington yesterday, I took the pledge which Miss Harriett Elliott is eventually going to ask all householders in the country to take during Civilian Defense Week.

Knowing quite well that, in the White House, it would be impossible for either Mrs. Nesbitt or me to sign this pledge honestly without the co-operation of the whole White House staff, I asked all those who were on duty at noon to meet me.

I explained its meaning, particularly in not wasting anything. I urged them all to sign the pledge individually when it comes out, and to try to live up to it in the White House. I hope, also, that they will persuade their own families to join with us. They were most co-operative and my first suggestion came immediately from Mrs. Nesbitt, who said that we had certain things that were always left over after a big party, which could be sent to the self-help co-operative farm and fed to their animals. So we have found one useful outlet for leftovers which could not be used at all on our own table.

We hope very shortly to have a correspondence course available in the Office of Civilian Defense. It is a fairly simple study on nutrition and the duty of the consumer. Many people who cannot attend classes may be able to read these courses and go to a volunteer bureau or consumers' information bureau once to take a test. This will then make it possible for every household to feel it is part of the civilian defense effort.

My plane landed in New York City on time yesterday. It seemed a very short flight, because I had so much in my brief case to read and was so sleepy that I accomplished nothing between naps. We drove to Hyde Park and found that everyone had had a busy day. The President enjoyed speaking to the teachers of the county in our consolidated high school. He has some very decided views on education which I think are very practical. Princess Juliana had been over to Millbrook to see some friends, and then had gone to the school meeting and driven around with the President, so she had a busy day, too. Mrs. Helm and Miss Thompson joined us for dinner, and all of us were glad to spend a quiet evening around the fire.

This morning we went up to Hyde Park village a little after 11 o'clock to vote, and I explained what a voting machine was like to Princess Juliana. She told me that they still use pencils in Holland, and that women are not allowed to vote until they are 25.

Alabama Girl Impresses Hollywood As Feminine Diamond Jim Brady

By Louella O. Parsons.

VIRGINIA HILL, Hollywood's lavish hostess.

like Tennyson's immortal brook, it goes on forever.

Claude Rains gets another kindly, philosophical role on the order of "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" in "Moonlight" with Jean Gabin and Ida Lupino. If this keeps up, somebody should star Claude in "Here Comes Mr. Rains" and get it over with once and for all. Once an actor makes a hit in a certain type of role the producers and casting directors seem to forget that he can do anything else. How many of you bright students can remember when Claude played meekness? Be that as it may, he remains the gentle philosopher.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 3.—(INS) The greatest spender who has hit Hollywood in years is a 24-year-old girl named Virginia Hill, who says Alabama is her native state. Virginia has been called the feminine Diamond Jim Brady — also the feminine Rex. St. Cyr because she throws money right and left—but where she gets all this cash, as well as her expensive wardrobe, no one seems to know. Her money 'tis said, is wired her and then she loses no time in putting it into circulation.

Sam Goldwyn is so intrigued with the stories told about Virginia, who has been likened to Elsa Maxwell in her party-giving propensities, that he has added a scene to "Ball of Fire" in which she plays herself—a hostess. She came on the Goldwyn set today carrying three shoe boxes full of jewels, three gowns made at a cost of $500 apiece and seven fur coats. But Virginia, I happen to know, doesn't spend all her money on herself. She is generous and the girls in Perc Westmore's beauty shop have received tips ranging from $10 to $25. When she took over Countess Sonya's restaurant for a Halloween party she invited 150 guests and a few weeks ago she gave a soiree at the Mocambo estimated to have cost $7,500. Recently she spent $20,000 buying a New York night club. The stories told of her are so fabulous they are unbelievable.

I don't suppose Robert Young is a bit better actor than he was a year ago, but all of a sudden MGM bosses are sold on him and I'll tell you why. In every sneak preview of "H. M. Pulham, Esq." there were raves over Bob. Funny thing, I didn't think when MGM cast him, he was the type, but apparently both he and Hedy Lamarr, as well as Ruth Hussey, clicked in such a way that a big selling campaign is under way for the movie. Bob is to be starred in "Merrily We Roll Along," based on the New York play, and Everett Riskin, who has lately joined Leo the Lion, will make it his first film. Everett was with Columbia for a long time and produced such pictures as "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" and "The Awful Truth." Now I am wondering if Hedy will again be teamed with Bob.

Carolyn Lee, Paramount's wonder child who proved more than a match for the Quiz Kids when they were Jack Benny's guests in Hollywood, is to be starred in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Y. Frank Freeman, I suspect, had a hand in deciding to remake the Kate Douglas Wiggin child classic for Carolyn, aged seven, is his great friend and he is her staunch admirer. The last time "Mrs. Wiggs" was made as a movie Virginia Weidler, who was then a very little girl, and Bill Fields shared honors. This is the third time it has been filmed and every time it has made money, for

THESE WOMEN -- By d'Alessio

"I don't think we'll buy them after all—Junior may get hurt. Thank you for the demonstration."

Sombreros and horses are in the spotlight and rightly so with the rodeo coming to town November 10. Dude ranch clothes have influenced many of our own spectators sports fashions. Above, Mrs. William Elsas wears her authentic dude ranch costume, including cowboy boots and nail-studded belt. With her, Mrs. Harold Gunby wears a spectator sports costume which has many interesting features of western inspiration. Her beige wool dress is trimmed with a jeweled horseshoe lapel pin, and her fascinating necklace was strung by the Hopi Indians from dyed sunflower seeds. Notice the gauntlet style gloves and the sombrero hat made of bright green wool. Mrs. Gunby's dress and accessories are available in a local store. Call Winifred Ware at Walnut 6565 to find where they can be bought.

Forget Old Beau After Marriage

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I am 23 years old and have been married for four years. I have a baby a year old. I love my husband and I know he loves me. I went with another boy for some time before I married and I cannot seem to forget him. When I meet him on the street my heart turns a dozen flips. What is this I feel toward him? I am forever dreaming of him. Is it possible to love two men at once?

GREY EYES.

Yes, it is possible to love two men at once, but it is not sensible. There are many different kinds of love, but my advice to you is to stick to the love you have for your husband. You are still romancing over a memory and the sooner you forget it the better off you will be.

BROKEN DATES DESERVE SOME PUNISHMENT. Dear Dixie:

Recently I met a boy who is very nice and attractive. I had several friendly chats with him during the months that followed, but he did not ask me for a date until recently. I have been going with him ever since. He has broken three dates with me but always comes back and apologizes. He goes with other girls and does not object to me going with other boys. He does not object to me going with other boys. He does not come to see me often but it is not because he cannot, for he only lives three miles from my home. He has not called in three weeks. I like him very much, and he tells me he is thinking a lot of me, but do you think he does? If he does why does he act that way? I am not taking this matter too seriously, but would you continue going with him? As I have told you, I think a great deal of him and enjoy being with him. What do you think I should do?

WONDERING GIRL.

If you enjoy being with him and like him enough to let him come when he desires, then continue having dates with him. Why not have other plans when he asks you for a date. That will show him you are not depending on him to go out. There is really no excuse for a boy to continue breaking dates with a girl, and the more you let him get away with it the more he will break them. I think he likes you and wants to be with you, but I also think he takes you too much for granted.

NOTE TO A READER. Dear Friend in Windsor, Ga.: Write to me for the information and I will give it to you.

Quinine Used As Cold Preventive

By Dr. William Brady.

I have read your articles for a number of years (writes O. B. P.) and agree with your ideas in most cases, but take exception to your caustic remarks relative to quinine for malaria and yellow fever. (My files fail to reveal the caustic remarks to which O. B. P. alludes, but then, perhaps he has confused something else with my remarks.) I went to Panama in 1905 (continues O. B. P.) and retired in 1936, so I saw men get dead for weeks at a time with too much quinine, but in every case if the quinine was taken soon enough it routed the malaria and yellow fever. I saw men die from malaria because they did not take the quinine until it was too late. Have noticed this new stuff the doctors have been trying in the place of quinine in the past ten years or so doesn't work as well as quinine, and they have to go back to quinine. So for me it will be 20 grains of quinine right off the bat if or when malaria comes off and then send for the doctor. (O. B. P.)

The same mail brought a postcard from Mrs. C., who says the druggist refused to sell her one grain quinine capsules, tablets or pills, which he deems unsuitable for children, and will I please explain.

I do wish I knew what caustic remarks O. B. P. found in my column—I'm a great believer in the value of quinine both as a remedy right prophylactic dose of quinine. For a person weighing 150 pounds three grains twice a day is the right prophylactic dose to take as a prophylactic against the cri. For a child weighing less than 50 pounds, less quinine should be given in proportion with the weight.

Further instructions are given in monograph, "Quinine in Modern Medicine"—for copy send stamped envelope bearing your address.

Hopkinsville, Purple Game Here Assured

Final arrangements for a football game between Coach Shorty Doyal's undefeated, untied, unscored upon Boys' High eleven and Hopkinsville (Ky.) High, undefeated since 1939, were completed last night.

Coach Ralph Mills will bring his powerhouse to Atlanta for the fray on Friday, November 28. The two great elevens which will be vying for the topmost spot in the southern prep football sun are quite likely to come up to their clash with 21 straight victories apiece. The invaders have captured 20 straight and have only Madisonville yet to face.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Bobby Bore Down

Roy Mundorff reached supreme heights as a cameraman in the Tech-Duke game. He captured the action on celluloid as clearly as it was seen on Grant field Saturday. Which is no small feat. Usually, in the moving pictures of a game, some of the detail is lost along the way. Some of the action blends with shadows, etc. But not so with the Mundorff films. They are 100 per cent faithful and as clear as a crystal stream.

I wanted to see the pictures to "freshen up" on a couple of points. I wanted, for one thing, to see Bobby Sheldon perform again.

He went into the huddle after Bosch was hurt, they said, and, with a trace of tears in his eyes, told the boys, "I can't take Johnny's place, but I'll do the best I can."

Bobby's best was not quite good enough, but it was mighty good.

Physically he was no equal of the lumbering Goliaths from the Piedmont section, but in spirit he was easily their match.

Sheldon might have clicked on one touchdown pass he started in the direction of big George Webb, who was open on the goal line. But a Duke player barely tipped the ball with outstretched fingers as he rushed in to break up the attempt. The ball wobbled crazily and fell short.

Another time he was so badly rushed he lost almost a dozen yards. And then he got off a pass as he was hurried and Barnett, on his knees, was fortunate to be in its path. He needed better protection.

Sheldon is improving tremendously as a Jacket player. At Boys' High he was quarterback and one of Shorty Doyal's better boys on Purple teams which were short of championship caliber.

At Tech, however, he has been Johnny Bosch's sub and just a handy boy to have around. That is, he was until Saturday.

Against Duke he did everything as well as Bosch would have done except in the throwing of passes.

And who, indeed, can throw the ball as well as Bosch around these diggings?

Amazing Thing Every Tech man who has the opportunity should see the pictures—if he didn't see the game. It is amazing, indeed,

Coaches Plan To Tighten Up On Air Defense

Hope To Stop Allen Who Wrecked Jackets Last Year.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Life is becoming just a jump from one defense to another and then back again for the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets, who sloshed through their final scrimmage of the week yesterday.

Starting with the Fighting Irish themselves, Tech was called on to defend against the Notre Dame system of attack. Then they shifted to stop the single-wing of Vanderbilt. Then back against the Notre Dame style for Auburn. Then to the single-wing for Duke. And now back to the Notre Dame, employed by Kentucky with a few variations, most noticeable of which is the absence of a shift. The backs merely line up in a box formation instead of shifting into it.

The Yellow Jackets were put through their defensive scrimmage yesterday after working on offense during most of Tuesday's drill. Before scrimmaging against the freshmen, who were running Kentucky plays, the varsity got a stiff dose on the blocking dummies.

PASS DEFENSE STRESSED.
Pass defense will be stressed today as Tech fears the tosses of Ernie Allen, who wrecked the Jackets last season. The small Tech backs have had trouble all season defending against enemy aerials and hope to correct this department before Saturday's game.

Chief reason for Tech's lax pass defense has been the inexperience and smallness of the backs. Davey Eldredge, Jim Kuhn, Al Faulkner and Pat McHugh are all sophomores and need experience against passes. (These, in addition to veteran Johnny Bosch, Ralph Plaster and Boddy Dodd, are small in size, which makes it difficult to cover elongated ends of the enemy.)

One of the cheering features of Tech's play this fall has been the excellent place-kicking of Jack Helms and Ralph Plaster. Helms, a sophomore, excels in kicking off, while Plaster does most of the extra-point kicking. In fact, the Jackets have missed but one extra point all season while kicking seven. Two of three were good against Chattanooga while the batting average was 1,000 against Vanderbilt and Auburn.

Backs To Play End For Wildcats Here.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 5.—(P)—Fullback Bob Herbert and Quarterback Tommy Zinn may start at end berths for injury-wrecked Kentucky against Georgia Tech Saturday, Coach Ab Kirwan said today.

The two starting backs worked out at the wings this afternoon and Kirwan said he expected "fairly successful results."

Bill Portwood, regular end, and three reserve flankmen all are on the sidelines with injuries.

Kirwan indicated he might take only a 22-man squad to Atlanta.

Castleberry Almost Sure To Set Mark

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 5.—(P)—Unless the scene shifts mighty fast, Clint Castleberry, Boys' High All-Southern halfback, is a dead-shot to cop the 1941 G. I. A. A. scoring title and set an all-time record for the league.

Castleberry now holds a total of 90 points, official records show, and has averaged better than 12 points a game.

Lake Here Yields 3 Huge Bass

8-Pounders Landed at Capital City

Shades of Lake Verne, the St. John's river and other great bass streams!

Virtually in the heart of Atlanta two fishermen yesterday boated three bass weighing a total of approximately 24 pounds.

All three were almost eight pounds. Two other bass weighed two pounds apiece. It is understood they were thrown back.

Jack Hogg and Frank Holt, fishing yesterday afternoon in the lake at Capital City, were the lucky ones. They were using gold-fish and Baltimore minnows as lures.

Stewart Witham, who reported the catch, is going to fish the lake tomorrow. So is Stewart's cousin, Roby Robinson, who has been fishing there regularly with only fair results.

MAN FROM MARS—You're wrong, this fellow's not from Mars—he's a Wildcat from the University of Kentucky football team. Goggle-eyed Alan Parr will be at the right flank position when the Kentucky Wildcats come to town next Saturday for the Georgia Tech game. Parr measures 6 feet, 3 inches and weighs 190 pounds.

Two-Hour Drill Ends Work for 'Gator Contest; Team Leaves for St. Augustine Tonight.

By F. M. WILLIAMS.
ATHENS, Ga., Nov. 5.—Devoting most of the time to defense, Coach Wallace Butts sent his Georgia Bulldogs through a two-hour drill this afternoon that practically wound up preparation for Saturday's clash with the Florida 'Gators in Jacksonville Saturday.

The Bulldog mentor said he would hold only a light workout tomorrow before departing for the Florida game tomorrow night at 7:15 o'clock.

TO ST. AUGUSTINE.
Georgia is leaving for the game one day earlier than usual and will travel to St. Augustine, where they will work out shortly Friday.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(AP)—Headed by Captain Frank Wing, who captured the prized individual Bowman challenge cup in near-record time, the United States Army team completely dominated the military jumping competition of the national horse show's opening session tonight.

Outclassing the challenges of teams from Cuba, Peru and West Point, the four-man squad representing Fort Riley, Kansas, turned in five perfect rides in six tries before 9,000 spectators in evening gowns, white shirt fronts and plain ready-mades who turned out in Madison Square Garden.

Oglethorpe Seeks First Victory

Petrels Play at Statesboro Friday

For the first time this year Coach John Patrick's Oglethorpe eleven is in good shape for a game. The Stormy Petrels will depart today for their 3 o'clock Friday afternoon game at Statesboro with South Georgia Teachers, and the Peachtree roaders will be at full strength as they go after their first win of the year after losing three straight.

All 18—that is all the playable gridirers Patrick has on the squad—are ready to go now. Even Joe Tosches, Petrel backfield ace who has been handicapped with a bad ankle all year, is set to go at full tilt. Tosches and Angelo Ferrar, who has been setting off most of the Petrel offensive fireworks, should be able to make it tough on the Teachers.

Patrick reports his offense has been doing well this year, but a lack of reserves of any kind have made the going too tough for his hustling but outmanned charges, who came close tripping a big Presbyterian team in the first game of the season, until the Patrickians ran out of reserves and gas late in the tilt.

Jenkins Denies Dressen Seen

He'll Step Out As Ring Champ

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Nov. 5.—(INS)—Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins tonight served notice he does not intend to give up his title but, on the other hand, will battle even the New York Boxing Commission for it.

Denying New York stories he intends to yield the crown, Jenkins said, "I won it the hard way and anyone who ever gets it from me is going to knock me out."

Willie Ketchum, the champ's trainer, telephoned Jenkins to stay in Hot Springs until further notice. Ketchum will appear before the commission tomorrow to request a postponement of Jenkins' fight with Sammy Angott, December 19—a request the commission has heretofore declined.

Earlier Jenkins had answered the commission's order to appear for an examination for the Angott fight by saying: "I don't want to forfeit my title but I'm not going to train, much less fight, unless I'm in perfect physical condition. I'm not going to train with a broken neck."

Jenkins suffered a fractured vertebra and painful rib injuries in a motorcycle accident.

Fulton Eleven, Hapeville Vie In East Point

Boys' High Out To Avenge 12-7 Defeat Suffered Last Year.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

The Tech High and Boys' High B teams, which tangled at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon at Ponce de Leon Park, will inaugurate day-time play for the season among the preps, and at the same time give the fans a preview of the Purple-Smithie classic which will be played Saturday of next week at Grant Field.

The charges of Henry Madden and Swede Phillips should be fairly evenly matched as they were in their outings of 1939 and 1940. Last year the Smithie Bees shaded the Purple wearers, 12 to 7, to gain revenge for their defeat they suffered the year before when Milton Miller, now a regular guard on the great unbeaten Hurricane varsity eleven, leaped out of the line to intercept a pass and ramble back 96 yards for a touchdown.

The Smithie Buzzers have won five of six tilts this year, a better record than the little Purples boast, but both beat the G. M. A. second-stringers, two touchdowns to one, and appear to be very evenly matched.

LEROY CARTER.

One of the features of the fray is quite apt to be the kicking of little Leroy Carter, star Smithie back who also is a fine pass receiver. He is adept at punting and place kicking. Earl Page is another back who has been doing much ground gaining for Phillips' outfit.

Richard Crowe, an end, weighs only 120 pounds soaking wet, but they say he really is a wee ball of fire, and the team captain, Guard Jack Williams, is a stand-out line performer.

Boyd Skelton, who has tallied 30 points to become high point man for the Purple Stringers, Merrill Ewing, cousin of Ralph and Charlie, Purple varsity backs, and Veazy LeCraw, the mayor's youngster, are doing splendid work in the backfield for Madden's gang.

CLINT'S BROTHER.

Jimmy Castleberry, brother of sensational Clint—and need you ask who he is in the Smithie brand at end for the Bees, and Billy Keene has done some scoring when it counted most. Robert Vaden and Captain Billy Mewborn, two capable pivot men, and Leonard Bethea and Gordon Hunt, brother of Varsity End Howell, are guards who show much promise of future stardom.

Coach C. C. Willis' much improved Fulton High Red Birds, who know how it feels to win a few this year, will meet a stern test at 3:15 this afternoon at Russell High in East Point where they will do battle with Coach Roy Brewer's Hapeville team in the only other game of the day scheduled in the city or environs.

The Marist Cadets journey to Columbus to take on a fine Jordan High eleven, one of the toughest the Atlantas will be called on to face all year. This game today also will be played in the afternoon.

Six-Man Football

Slated at Tucker

The strong Tallahassee (Fla.) High six-man football team, which finished in second place in the North Florida League last year, comes here to play the Powers Ferry Day School sextet, victor in four games in five outings this year. The tilt will take place in Tucker this afternoon.

Don Louchs, national committeeman in the Six-Man Football Association, is coach of the invading Tallahassee team. The Powers Ferry outfit is again under the tutelage of Coach Lawrence Whalen.

Basketball

J. E. A. PLAY.

A three-ring circus on a basketball court—that's what the "Relic" have in store for the fans at the Jewish Educational Alliance basketball opener on Sunday, November 24, at 7 p. m. The "Relics," a group of old timers that have been the most colorful team in the history of Alliance basketball, have arranged a show all their own to fit the occasion. The "Relics" will play JTC, the youngest team in the senior circuit. The "Relics" boast of having a collection of former star players on their team. Some of the boys played way back in the early 20s. Herbert Besser and Sidney Feldman, of the old-time Strausmans, and Byron Cohen, A.Z.A. 134 graduates, have been added to the team.

JTC, the chief threat to SOZ for championship honors in the Alliance Senior league, will depend on a fast break for a victory. In order to halt the taller and more experienced "Relics," JTC will set up a zone defense. Keep your eyes on Hank Levinson, JTC guard, and one of the best shots in the league. In the second game, A.Z.A. 134, league champs, will open doors of their defense against a strong SOZ team. This game is on a par with the "Relic"-JTC game. A.Z.A. 134 is built around Abe Hoffman, Bob Ney, Harry Seltz and Marvin Wender. The SOZ team, a squad of veterans, will probably start with Fred Levy and Sidney Mendel as forwards, Merton Levin at center and Isaac Rousso and Jonas Mitchell as guards.

The SOZ team is looking forward to a banner year. They finished in second place the past two seasons, but this looks like their year. Immediately after the games SOZ will sponsor its annual dance.

ALL IN THE GAME

how one team can outplay another so decisively and yet lose by as many as 14 points.

As Cameraman Mundorff, a man experienced in tough wins and losses as basketball and baseball coach, said, "It happens in the best of families." There was something of particular interest I wanted to see again, in addition to the performance of Sheldon, and that was the handling of Tackle Mike Karmazin by the Tech line.

There had been a great build-up for Karmazin through the season. The Tech boys got hold of it and were determined to deflate the "All-America" propaganda.

They truly worked on Karmazin. It was through his position that many of those sledge-driving bucks of Ralph Plaster went. But in spite of all the concentration on his spot in the line, Karmazin managed, now and then, to prove troublesome. He broke through early to drop Bosch for a large loss.

So much for the details. The game was a real refresher with respect to the improvement shown by the Tech team. Mack Tharpe's line seemed better than ever, although it has been plenty good in the other games, and the Jacket deception on offense was a joy to review.

Why Not N. Y. U?

Boys' High, disappointed at not being able to schedule an outside opponent, might try New York University.

Dr. Mal Stevens' Violets might not be quite as good as Austin High, of Chicago, or Hopkinsville, Ky., but they'd be an out-of-state opponent, anyway.

It makes an old Rebel's heart bleed to ponder Dr. Stevens' ill fortune on the gridiron this season. Dr. Stevens, in case you came in late, is the same who incited a near-riot the last time Georgia played N. Y. U. in New York. He did it with his big mouth the week before the game, charging the Bulldogs with using all sorts of unfair tactics.

It all culminated in a fight at the half—a fight which Georgia subs won fists down. Georgia regulars didn't even have to swing. Spider Nelson had the situation well in hand.

At any rate, Dr. Stevens' fortunes have flickered since then. That is, as coach of N. Y. U.

To date the Violets have triumphed over Penn Military College and Lafayette. They have lost decisively to Texas A. & M., Syracuse, Holy Cross and Penn State.

And the worst is yet to come. Missouri, Tulane and Fordham are the remaining foes.

Poor Dr. Stevens!

The Big Game

Come Saturday Notre Dame's position in national football affairs definitely will be known. The Fighting Irish, tied by Army on a muddy field, tackle the other arm of the service, the Navy. The tie by the Cadets is a challenge to the Midshipmen. It would never do for them to lose to Notre Dame. This is the big game of the day and, somehow, I like Frank Leahy's entry from South Bend.

Durocher Balks At Yank Uniform

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 5.—(INS)—Not even the make-believe world of Hollywood could put Manager Leo "The Lip" Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers into a New York Yankee uniform today.

The uniform was made by the Samuel Goldwyn wardrobe department to Leo's measure for his test for the forthcoming pleats based on the life of Lou Gehrig, Yankee immortal.

But Leo, prodded by a "Don't wear a Yankee uniform" wire from Dodger Owner Larry MacPhail, took the test in his own Brooklyn uniform, which he hopes to wear next fall in another World Series against the Yanks.

Senator Player Passes His Exam

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Nov. 5.—(AP)—J. K. (Buddy) Lewis, star third baseman and outfielder of the Washington Senators, passed his physical examination for appointment as an air corps cadet here today.

"I just decided I might as well be in the air corps as in the infantry," said Lewis, who said he expected to get a call from his draft board this month.

Auburn Squad In Good Shape For State Tilt

AUBURN, Ala., Nov. 5.—Annual football rivalry between Auburn and Mississippi State, two traditional Southeastern Conference foes, will be renewed at Legion Field in Birmingham next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Last year the Tigers of Coach Jack Meagher ran into their toughest opposition in the Delta State Bulldogs, who were undefeated and won the Orange Bowl championship. Only a 7-7 tie with Auburn kept State from having a perfect record in 1940.

The Tigers hope to be in better physical shape for State in making their second appearance of the season in Birmingham than they were in their last two starts against Georgia Tech and Georgia. And they will be if Left Halfback Clarence Harkins is ready to play. He has been a cripple since the S. M. U. engagement.

Clarence Harkins engaged in dummy practice today, dividing time with Monk Gafford at left half. He appeared to be improving and may be able to see some service this weekend.

Hill Goes Home To Work on His Plans; Drusilla Comes to His Apartment

By Alma Sioux Scarberry.

INSTALLMENT XXXV.

"Losing you, my darling, should make any man think if he is ever going to do any thinking," Curt bent, kissing her tenderly. "I love you, April. So terribly. Let's just talk about us. Can't I make you change your mind and marry me now? Every minute I live without you is wasted."

April held him close, wanting so much to make him happy. But she could not bring herself to promise she would marry him before she could walk again.

Hill had seen very little of Drusilla Bayne since the early morning hours, when they had walked out of the night club and learned from the headlines that April was in Channing hospital. Drusilla was becoming desperate with fear that she was losing Kent Hillier.

When she had to make excuses to her friends for Hill's continued absence from their parties her ego suffered almost more than she could bear. As a substitute escort she was being seen quite frequently with a well-known band leader, but Hill was her only real interest.

In all of Drusilla's hectic life she had never been as interested in any man as Kent Hillier. She was glad he had any money because if he married her fortune she would have him tied, she reasoned in her own peculiar way.

Dru had to admit to herself that she had tricked Hill into getting engaged to her, but she had no intention of letting him get away. It was no joke to her. She'd been in love with him too long. Ever since she had seen him win the championship at Miami, Dru had considered Hill the most desirable man she'd ever seen.

His indifference to her had only served to pique her interest. Drusilla was so used to men finding her irresistible. Hill's almost brutal blindness to her charms made her the more determined to capture and hold him.

Hill had taken Kenny home after seeing his mother at the hospital, and stayed with the child while he had his bath and supper. Then he had read to Kenny a few minutes before he went to sleep. Afterward he drove back to Flushing, stopping at a lunch wagon for a hurried bite to eat. He was tired and he wanted to get back to his apartment and go over some plans for the golf school.

Hill took a shower and got into his pajamas and robe. Then he sat down at his desk and began to work. It was difficult to concentrate because the picture of April lying helpless in the hospital blotted out everything else.

After a time he gave up trying on the plans and got up to pace the floor. The thought that April would always be helpless, that she would never walk and dance and be gay again was almost more than he could bear.

How would April react when she learned the truth? Would Curt De Witt still want to marry her? Would she marry him, knowing she would be a helpless cripple? What would happen to the beautiful girl who had once been his wife? The woman he had hurt so deeply that she had been shirking her responsibility as his wife and mother.

How right she had been about his duty to his family. All the time he had known she was right, but if he had admitted it he would have admitted he was lazy and had been shirking his responsibility as a husband and father.

What woman with an ounce of pride or character could have lived with a man who would not bear his share of the burdens attached to a home and the raising of children? Now he would give his life to be able to take all of April's burdens from her slender, tired shoulders and it was too late.

Hill walked the floor in an agony of remorse, his face lined with anxiety. If only he could have Kenny with him while April was ill, it might not seem quite so lonely. But he had no right to his son. He had forfeited that right.

Finally, Hill went to a decanter on the sideboard and poured himself a drink, gulping it swiftly. Then he lit a cigarette and strode to the desk and sat down to pour again over the plans for the golf school. He had to snap out of it, he told himself sternly, or he would go out of his mind.

There was no sense in letting his nerves get the better of him he reasoned. If he let go he would be of no use to April whatsoever. The only way in which he could help her was to work hard and save money and take over all the financial responsibilities possible.

At least she would never need worry about money, if he could make a success of the Kent Hillier School of Golf. He'd find a way to make her accept his help after she got out of the hospital, no matter how strenuously she objected.

Hill was bent over the remodeling plans, trying hard to concentrate and get his mind off April and her helplessness when the door bell rang. He swore mildly. There was only one thing to do. Refuse to answer it.

But when the bell rang long and continuously, as though the caller meant to ring all night if necessary, Hill got up to answer it. It was Drusilla. She was the last person he had expected to see, as she had never been to his apartment.

"Hello, darling," she smiled sweetly. "I hope you weren't asleep."

In the frame of mind he was in, Drusilla was the last person in the world Hill wanted to see. He could not have hid his annoyance if he had tried.

"Well, Dru," he said grimly, "this is a surprise. Why didn't you telephone before you came bursting into a man's apartment at 11 o'clock at night?"

A flicker of anger lit her heavily beaded eyes, but she smiled and said in what she fancied was her most luring contralto:

"Darling, don't be an old bear. Aren't you going to ask me in? We can't talk here on the doorstep."

Hill stepped aside. "Well, come in," he said rudely. "Now that you're here."

Dru entered, dropping her mink wrap over the back of a chair and taking off her little flowered hat. Then she held out her arms:

"Aren't you going to kiss me, sweet?"

Reluctantly Hill went through the motions of kissing Dru. Dru laughed lightly, but not very convincingly.

"My, that was a fine exhibition of passion! I believe I did wake you, darling."

She settled herself on the divan and lit a cigarette. Hill went back to his chair at the desk.

"I've been working," he said shortly. "I've a lot to do tonight before I can go to sleep."

"Working?" Dru raised her brows. "Tell me about it."

Continued Tomorrow.

Joan Davis Sings With John, Rudy

Versatile Joan Davis, survivor of two recent Rudy Vallee-John Barrymore programs, has been found equal to a longer session and is now signed to appear in all November broadcasts over the NBC-Red network (WSB at 9 o'clock tonight).

Joan will take part in a sketch entitled "The Haunted House." In reality the skit will be a take-off of that movie success, "Hold That Ghost," in which Miss Davis played.

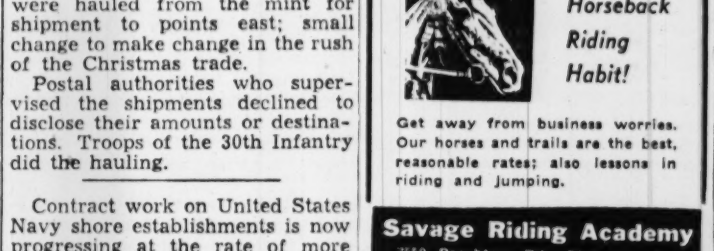

Hattie McDaniel, famous Negro mammy character actress, will be another guest.

Supply of Small Change Ready for Yule Shoppers

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—(AP)—That merry jingle at the mint today was just a reminder from Uncle Sam that Christmas is only 50 days away.

Truck load after truck load of small change—pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, half dollars—were hauled from the mint for shipment to points east; small change to make change in the rush of the Christmas trade.

Postal authorities who supervised the shipments declined to disclose their amounts or destinations. Troops of the 30th Infantry did the hauling.

Actors, Singer To Visit Bing At 9 Tonight

Crosby, Connie Boswell Sing Popular Tunes on WSB Hour.

Bing Crosby has invited his old friend Brian Donlevy—who stars with Bing and Mary Martin in Paramount's forthcoming "Birth of the Blues"—to join in the festivities of the Kraft Music Hall tonight, along with French film actress Michele Morgan and bass-buffalo Salvatore Baccaloni of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The show airs over the Red network of NBC and WSB at 9 p. m.

Donlevy, veteran of many successful films, was a member of the famous Lafayette Escadrille during the first World War. He was a natural for the role of a hard-boiled but sentimental flight instructor in Paramount's "I Wanted Wings."

Miss Morgan got rave notices from critics when she appeared with Charles Boyer in the French film "L'Orage." She soon will be seen in "Joan of Paris." Salvatore Baccaloni made his debut at the Metropolitan last season.

Bing will sing "Chattanooga Choo Choo," "Do You Care?" "I Wonder What's Become of Sally," "Shepherd's Serenade," "Lone Star Trail" and "Prairie Land Lullaby." Connie Boswell will sing "Sand in My Shoes" and "Elmer's Tune" and the Crosby-Boswell duet will be "Tea for Two."

Roosevelt Talks On Radio Today

President Roosevelt's address before the delegates to the International Labor Organizations will be heard over coast-to-coast networks of three Atlanta stations, WGST, WATL and WSB.

The talk will be made in Washington.

British Agent Confers Here On U. S. Trade

Tells Atlanta Retailers What Goods They Can Expect.

Sir Kenneth Lee, a representative of the British government, returned to Atlanta for the first time in 35 years to confer with businessmen here on their needs and tell them what British goods they may expect in the future.

Sir Kenneth spoke last night before a group of Atlanta retailers at a dinner at the Capital City Club given by James A. M. Marjoribanks, British consul.

Sir Kenneth said that practically all the goods that the British are still able to sell the United States are glassware and earthenware, because of the difficulty of turning these factories into war plants.

Sir Kenneth, whose headquarters are located in New York, came here from Birmingham, England, visited Atlanta in 1906 on a tour of the United States.

Until appointed as representative of the British Industrial and Export Council in June, Sir Kenneth was a member of the British Trade Mission to South America.

BRITISH AGENT—Sir Kenneth Lee, representative of the Industrial and Export Council of the British Board of Trade, was here last night to report to Atlanta retailers what British goods they may expect in the future.

An installment plan payment of fines was suggested yesterday by Recorder Luke Arnold, of traffic court, in a letter to Mayor LeCraw.

Recorder Arnold's letter, in reply to a recent statement by Assistant Police Chief G. Neal Ellis urging more drastic traffic laws, stated, in part:

"The installment plan, which would enable the court to levy stiff fines and force payment over a long period of time, would be more of a deterrent to speeding than all the jail sentences we could muster."
